Save our paddling pool plea by 1,000 residents

Father leads campaign against replacing facility with splash park for youngsters

By Charlotte Page

A PETITION against turning a town paddling pool into a splash park has gathered more than 1,000 signatures.

Harlow Council agreed at a recent meeting to replace the town's paddling pools over the next two years.

However, following the announcement, a petition has been set up to save the town park pool, with it argued as being the most 'iconic' of them all.

Harlow dad Martin Dear, 43, said: "The petition came about because I saw Harlow Council's Facebook post about the splash parks being built and the way it was being spun as an improvement, and also as a 'done deal' without any form of public consultation, made me angry inside."

"I wondered if any other residents felt the same way, so I started the petition and shared it on a few of the local social media pages and groups as a way of finding this out. The response to it has been unbelievable."

The petition, at the time of going to print, had 1,052 signatures and a string of comments in favour of keeping the paddling pool, which is situated behind the Lee Manning Centre.

Mr Dear said that while he knew there was "a lot of love in the town for our paddling pools," to see people engaging and supporting the petition has been "truly marvellous".

The paddling pools are popular with residents

Four years ago at the BBC Proms, Aurora became the first orchestra to perform a symphony from memory, without the aid of printed sheet music. Since then the orchestra has electrified audiences around the world with this direct and communicative performance style. For this concert, which forms part of Cambridge Summer Music Festival, principal conductor Nicholas Collon again teams up with BBC Radio 3 presenter Tom Service to offer audiences a uniquely vivid musical introduction with live excerpts. They unpack the musical

Heroes from PJ Masks entertain youngsters at Harvey Centre

Children meet up with TV favourites

SUPERHEROES from one of the most popular children's TV programmes gathered in Harlow this week to tell stories about their adventures.

The Harvey Centre welcomed heroes from PJ Masks on Saturday, who told children tales about how they saved the day in a series of storytime sessions led by a narrator throughout the day.

PJ Masks is a popular children's animated TV series based on French author Romuald Racioppo's imaginative and striking picture book series Les Pyjamasques.

Action

Each episode that airs on Disney Junior sees Catboy, Owlette and Gekko swoop into action at night, solving mysteries that arise during the day to make things perfect in the daytime world.

Many fans will know that Romeo, Luna Girl and Night Ninja consistently put the heroes to the test by causing trouble but always managing to leave a clue behind.

At the event, children were also able to transform into their favourite characters with a little help from the professional face painters.

There were also other activities available for families to get involved in free of charge.

Bryan Young, centre manager at The Harvey Centre, said: "PJ Masks is one of the biggest shows on children's TV so we are thrilled to have been able to book them for one of our summer events.

"Our younger customers were really excited to see their TV superheroes in real life and their appearance is sure to have created some magical memories for families to treasure."

The visit from the PJ Masks marks the start of a huge calendar of events to be held at The The Terrace throughout the rest of the year.

The next will be held on Sunday with performances by award-winning dance group Hip Hop Pop at 11.30am, 12.15pm and 1pm.

TWO of Harlow's parks have scooped awards for being among the best green spaces in the country.

Parndon Wood Nature Reserve and Harlow Town Park have once again been recognised by the Green Flag Award Scheme, which celebrates the UK's best outdoor spaces.

The Green Flag Award scheme recognises both well-managed parks and green spaces and sets a benchmark for the management of recreational outdoor spaces across the UK and internationally.

One of the recipients of the award for the tenth year running was Parndon Wood Nature Reserve.

The 1.5km woodland trail has been recorded as woodland for at least 900 years, allowing it to be described as "ancient woodland," according to ECCO, which runs the reserve.

Unique

Meanwhile Harlow Town Park is celebrating a third consecutive Green Flag Award for its 160 acres of green space, five unique gardens, adventure playground, paddling pool and Pets' Corner to name just a few.

Both of the Harlow spaces join a record breaking 1,883 UK parks that have received the prestigious award marking.

They are recognised once again as boasting the highest possible environmental standards, as well as being beautifully maintained with excellent visitor facilities.

Portfolio Holder for Community and Wellbeing, Councillor Eugenie Harvey said: "We are absolutely delighted that both Parndon Wood and our Town Park have received Green Flag Awards for the tenth and third years in a row."

"We know how much quality green spaces matter to our residents and visitors, and these awards celebrate the dedication that goes into maintaining them both to such a high standard.

"Parndon Wood and the Town Park are both hugely popular with residents of Harlow and the surrounding area, and that is down to the excellent management of both sites.

"I must say that although the Town Park is maintained to this high standard by the council and HTS and Parndon Wood by Harlow Council and local organisation ECCO, it's the fantastic contribution made by our teams of local volunteers who give us support that makes these awards even more special.

Hard work

"The Green Team, Town Park Volunteers and the Friends of Pets' Corner give up their own time to turn up, rain or shine, and put in a lot of hard work to keep both spaces looking beautiful.

"It's a testament to Harlow's community spirit that we have seen the Green Flag Awards return to Parndon Wood and the Town Park for another year."

International Green Flag Award scheme manager Paul Todd, said: "It has been a record-breaking year for Green Flag Awards, and it's fantastic to see such a diverse range of locations have been recognised.

"We are proud to have so many wonderful green spaces in the UK for people to experience, and encourage the public to head outdoors, explore their local area and find even more unexpected green spaces they can enjoy."

Soaring temperatures then heavy downpour caused pond's oxygen levels to drop

Mix of heat and rainfall caused fish to die

A NUMBER of fish died in a Harlow pond after oxygen levels fell to fatal levels due to a mix of hot weather and rainfall.

An operation team from the Environment Agency received multiple calls over the weekend reporting dead fish in Netteswell Pond.

The incident occurred after rain fell in a short period of time, following a spate of hot weather.

This led to surface water carrying pollutants often found in built up areas running into the pond – leading to a sudden reduction in oxygen levels.

Similarly, it is a natural process during the summer months for oxygen levels to drop meaning the Environment Agency is often called to reports of fish in distress.

Pictures shared on social media show a number of fish floating at the surface and concern from locals.

A spokeswoman for the Environment Agency said: "We received calls over the weekend of dead fish in Netteswell Pond in Harlow.

"Our operations team attended the site to inspect the pond and found lots of dead fish. The pond is owned/managed by the local authority and we helped to clean up the dead fish.

"The incident was caused by the recent rainfall which fell over a short period, following a warm and dry spell.

"The initial surface runoff carried pollutants often found in built-up areas. This led to a sharp reduction in the amount of oxygen in the water."

She added: "During summer we regularly respond to reports of 'fish in distress' due to natural processes reducing oxygen levels in the water."

"Hot, sunny weather can lead to low flows in rivers and still water fisheries (ponds and lakes) start to warm up."

"Small still waters are particularly susceptible."

"Responding to fish in distress is part of the Environment Agency's fisheries management role."

"Fisheries teams are trained to use aeration equipment or hydrogen peroxide to restore dissolved oxygen levels."

Rescued

"When necessary, fish may also be rescued and transferred to safety."

A similar incident happened in the River Stort near Bishop's Stortford on Sunday, with more than 1,000 fish dying due to the hot weather, leading to a reduction in oxygen levels.

An emergency operation was launched to put oxygen back into the water in order to allow fish to survive in a safe haven.

■ If you see fish in distress please call the Environment Agency's hotline on 0800 807060 and contact the fishery owner.

Report reveals Harlow was on or above target in 49 out of 53 of its performances

Underspend means that council has extra £1m in its coffers

HARLOW Council underspent by more than £1 million in the last financial year, according to a new report.

The council's Joint Financial and Performance report for 2017/18 looks at everyday services such as grass cutting, bin collections, street cleaning, benefit claims and planning services all provided by the council to more than 85,000 residents.

It also looks at how priorities have been met and how budgets have been managed from April 2017 to March 2018.

Findings show that the council performed on or above target in 49 out of 53 of its performances. However the council says that it is not complacent and strives to better the services it provides.

The council had an underspend of £1,276,000 – which it puts down to careful financial management – all of which will be reinvested and put towards 'providing new opportunities for residents'.

The underspend means that the project to transform Harlow's paddling pools into splash parks has been made possible, with £750,000 put aside for the initiative.

Councillor Mark Ingall says the money can be reinvested

Money will also be spent on new community and wellbeing initiatives, as well as allocated to support the Harlow and Gilston Garden Town project.

Councillor Mark Ingall, leader of Harlow Council, said: "Despite this being a time of great economic uncertainty and in the face of year-on-year cuts to the funding we receive from the Government, we have performed on or above target for 49 out of 53 performance indicators and completed 202 out of 238 corporate milestones showing that the services we provide are improving.

"But we are not complacent. There is certainly room to get even better at providing the services our residents deserve.

"Thanks to sound financial management, delivering efficiency savings a year early and the contribution made to Harlow from our new property and environment company, HTS, Harlow Council has not only balanced the books, but once again we have achieved an underspend, which can be reinvested to improve and provide new opportunities for local residents.

Exciting

"Harlow stands on the brink of an exciting future. We are well placed geographically to benefit from hi-tech economic growth, our plans for the provision of new housing and infrastructure that benefits Harlow are progressing well, and we are determined that our existing residents benefit from these exciting developments."

A PETITION submitted against turning Harlow Town Park paddling pool into a splash park has received more than 1,000 signatures.

Harlow Council agreed at a cabinet meeting on Thursday, July 19, that Harlow's paddling pools are to be replaced with splash parks over the next two years.

A splash park is suitable for children aged 12 and under and runs on circulated water, which is filtered and treated with chlorine to ensure that they are both clean and safe.

The major overhaul, which has been made possible due to an underspend in the council 2017/18 budget, will see the transformation made to paddling pools in Bush Fair, Old Harlow, Staple Tye, Summers and Harlow Town Park.

Following the announcement, a petition has been set up to save the town park pool, with it argued as being the most 'iconic' of them all.

Harlow dad Martin Dear, 43, said: "The petition came about because I saw Harlow Council's Facebook post about the splash parks being built and the way it was being spun as an improvement, and also as a 'done deal' without any form of public consultation, made me angry inside."

"I wondered if any other residents felt the same way, so I started the petition and shared it on a few of the local social media pages and groups as a way of finding this out."

"The response to it has been unbelievable."

The petition, at the time of going to print, had 1,052 signatures and a ### Statement from Harlow Council...

COUNCILLOR Mark Ingall, leader of Harlow Council, said: "These plans are not a 'done deal' and we have encouraged feedback and comments from the community from the very start."

"We have had an enthusiastic response to our plans from many of our residents and we have also received a real mixture of comments and ideas from the community."

"As we are at the early planning stages we are able to look at the comments and ideas and consider if and how some might be incorporated into the final plans."

"An important part of our democracy is that the views of local people are taken into account."

"We look forward to receiving this petition so it can be considered and debated by councillors, along with other comments and ideas, at the council meeting on September 20."

"The paddling pools are ageing facilities and in the very near future they are going to require a substantial investment just to keep them as they are."

"Our plans are about creating a more enjoyable day out and making these much-loved facilities safer and fit for the future. It is important to us that the play areas remain free to use and are accessible to all. We are also looking at what else we can do to improve the facilities including providing toilets."

"In other towns splash parks are extremely popular and there has been real advancement in recent years in what they can offer."

the outset to save them all might be a step too far, so named the Town Park one as it's the most iconic."

"It is centrally located within Harlow, its location in the valley makes it easy for parents who are not in the water with their children to supervise them from a higher vantage point and its proximity to Pet's Corner means it's the closest of any of them to a public toilet."

"While the emphasis is currently on the Harlow Town Park paddling pool, there are hopes that the petition will raise discussion of saving more than one if enough people share their opinions."

He suggests that when the paddling pools are not filled with water they are still used by young people for skateboarding, BMX bikes, roller skates and scooters.

He added: "Although there is a purpose-built skate park within the Town Park, it is not necessarily ideal for younger children or beginners, it has deep bowls and can get very busy."

"The drained paddling pools have long been used as an unofficial learning ground, where people who don't yet have the confidence or ability to use the main park can go and practice on smaller banks."

"They also act as satellite parks for the more experienced and take pressure off of the main park at busy times."

"The paddling pools are all located safely within park areas and keep these users, especially the younger ones, safely away from the roads and out of the only other large concreted areas of the town, such as the shopping centres."

"If the pools are all lost, these areas would inevitably become used for these purposes."

If the plans are given the go ahead as they are, Mr Dear said that just splash parks would give youngsters even less to do, with them being aimed at a specific age group.

"All of Harlow's paddling pools are an integral part of the town's fabric and history," he said.

The petition will need to be submitted to Harlow Council by September 12 for it to be discussed in the full council meeting on September 20.

Harlow Council says it is looking forward to receiving the petition and discussing it at a cabinet meeting.

'Homely' care home wins high praise from CQC inspectors

'Good' rating for residential care home for people with learning disabilities

A RESIDENTIAL care home for people with learning disabilities in Harlow has retained its 'good' rating as given by the Care Quality Commission (CQC).

Sanctuary Supported Living's (SSL) Livingstone House provides residential care for up to 19 adults with learning disabilities and has been praised by inspectors for its personalised support following an unannounced inspection at the end of June 2018.

Livingstone House was rated as 'good' in all five categories including safety, effectiveness, care, service response and leadership.

Residents are said to be able to make their own choices and live as independently as possible.

The report reads: "People were supported to have maximum choice and control of their lives and staff supported them in the least restrictive way possible; the policies and systems in the service supported this practice.

"Staff asked people's consent before any care or support was given, and we saw people had access to health and social care professionals when needed."

It was recognised that people are able to choose and prepare meals for themselves, with help from staff available, if needed.

Similarly, healthy eating is encouraged with a range of fresh fruit, vegetables and salads available.

Portion sizes had been drawn on paper plates to demonstrate portion sizes, how to eat well and remain healthy.

One resident told inspectors that they "shop and cook" for themselves, adding: "I love cooking."

Compassionate

The report continues: "Staff were kind and compassionate in the way they delivered support to people."

"There was a positive and fun atmosphere and we saw people and staff knew each other well."

"People's cultural and communication needs were well met."

"People were confident they could raise concerns if they needed to and these would be addressed."

"There was a good approach to planning and supporting activities which people wanted to participate in."

The atmosphere of the residential home was described as "homely".

Inspectors said: "We observed people and staff talking and laughing together which contributed to a relaxed and homely atmosphere where people were encouraged to be as independent as possible. We saw people going out independently, and people made clear choices about how and where they spent their time."

Also highlighted in the inspection was the dignity given to residents in the form of a pledge observed by all staff and printed on a poster.

The poster – which sees staff pledge that, should they see someone unsafe, lonely, in pain or being bullied, they will 'never walk by' – is used across all of SSL's CQC-registered services.

SSL local services manager Kerry Harding said: "I'm very proud of the team here at Livingstone House, whose commitment to providing personalised care for our residents has ensured this rating."

"We are always looking to build on our successes and deliver an ever higher quality of care."

Plans for affordable rent, shared ownership and private sale homes

Four-storey flats and terraced town houses vision for education land

PLANS to demolish a former education and community centre to make way for almost 50 new homes have been unveiled.

The proposal, submitted by HTA Design LLP, having been commissioned by Northbrooks House Developments LLP, is to build 47 dwellings at the Northbrooks House site in Harlow.

The scheme would comprise a mixture of homes including 20 flats in an apartment-style building and 27 houses with private external amenity for all homes and additional communal court-yards.

The Adult Learning College and Community Hall on the northern part of the site would be demolished after both Essex County Council and Harlow Council deemed these facilities to now be "surplus to requirements".

Both facilities are said to be "vacant and disused" after previously being used for community functions.

If approved, the northern site will be replaced with a four storey high block of flats, while the eastern edge will see a row of terraced town houses – two and a half storeys in height.

Two to three storey mews houses will be built at the south western end of the site.

These break down into eight new homes for affordable rent, four shared ownership homes and 35 new private sale homes.

Building materials will complement the character of the surrounding area and will mainly be brick in a natural colour – which is shown in a series of artist's impressions of how the development might look.

The communal space strives to provide an "informal doorstep play for the very young" and includes plans for stepping stones and balance beams, as well as a seating area ideal for adult supervision.

There will be 76 car parking spaces, plus secure bicycle storage for all homes.

Each home will have at least one dedicated parking space with larger homes having two spaces per dwelling.

Other on site parking will include a mixture of on-street and garage parking.

The application reads: "The proposals for the site present an opportunity to provide new homes within the Northbrooks area that cater for a mixture of needs and tenures and is designed to respond to the local site context. Our proposals seek to maximise the potential of the site by utilising an under-used site for homes and associated parking and amenity spaces."

It went on: "The application has benefited from the input of officers from Harlow District Council and Essex County Council throughout the pre-planning stage. The local community was given the opportunity to comment on the emerging designs which were issued to buildings adjoining the site in the form of a public consultation event."

Athlete gets behind bid to improve lifestyles

A HARLOW Paralympian has backed a strategy aiming to improve health and wellbeing.

Anne Wafula-Strike MBE, a wheelchair racer who represented Team GB, attended the launch of the Harlow Health and Wellbeing Partnership Strategy held in the Town Park on Wednesday, July 25.

The strategy is a ten-year plan for the provision of healthy lifestyles.

The strategy is guided by four main priorities and includes 'Startwell', which aims to give children and young people access to the early help they need to have the best start in life, eat well, enjoy good mental health and be ready for school.

Bewell, Staywell, Workwell aims to ensure that working-age adults can lead healthy and active lifestyles and to work in environments that support good health and wellbeing, while Agewell hopes to give adults who are 65 and over the ability to live healthy and independent lives.

Finally the Physical Activity and Mental Health principle enables all residents to lead active and fulfilling lives.

Ms Wafula-Strike MBE said: "I am excited about this because it highlights several solutions under one detailed strategy geared towards creating opportunities to a healthy lifestyle."

Fly-tipping at playing field reveals sexy side of illegal dumping

HARLOW Council has made an appeal to the public after rubbish was dumped on a cricket pitch.

A large pile of junk was abandoned on the playing field at Tye Green Cricket Club, on Tillwicks Road, earlier today (Friday, July 27).

After sifting through the fly-tipped mess, enforcement officers found items including furniture, tyres, cardboard and electrical goods.

But the most interesting discovery was a rectangular box which once contained a sex toy, or as the council dubbed it, a "personal item".

In a series of posts shared on the authority's dedicated Twitter page, a council spokesman revealed the mess left behind and encouraged anyone with information to get in touch.

They called for the owners of the rubbish to come back and clear the items from the green.

One tweet reads: "Not what we want to see on our green spaces, especially when they are used by families.

"If this was you, it would be great if you came back and cleared it yourself.

"If you don't then be warned our enforcement officers are investigating."

Romani man's culture and ethnicity led to three year reduction in his jail term

Sentenced halved for man who admitted sex with 'wife' of 12

A ROMANIAN man who was convicted and jailed for raping a 12-year-old girl he claimed was his wife has had his sentence nearly halved at an appeal.

The 26-year-old was jailed for six years at Chelmsford Crown Court in September 2017 after pleading guilty to raping a child under the age of 13.

The man, of gypsy Romani background, allegedly married the girl in their native country before moving to this country for work.

Although the girl had agreed to have sex, the man was still charged with rape because the law does not accept that a 12-year-old can give consent.

Car wash

The unlawful marriage came to the attention of the police after a raid at a car wash where it was feared children were being "exploited".

Further investigation led to an address in Epping where the man lived with the victim being searched. A small room with a double bed that was shared by the two was found – leading to the offender being taken into custody.

The man had his sentence reduced on appeal

The age of consent in both Romania and the UK is 16 years of age.

At the time of his trial the girl was pregnant and was believed to have returned to Romania.

Miss Kenyon, who spoke on behalf of the man at his trial, told the court previously that it was an "exceptional" case, with very "unusual circumstances".

She said: "There is no grooming, exploitation, force or coercion in this case.

"This was consent within a marriage, albeit an unlawful marriage.

"The marriage of a young girl and older man is not an extraordinary event in their culture.

"He is following that tradition and is caught up in it."

Roma are the biggest ethnic group in Romania and one of the largest in Europe, but still face a lot of persecution to this day.

Speaking at the appeal, Judge Sir Brian Keith explained that there was no question of force or pressure having been used against the girl.

But he added: "The emotional immaturity of a girl of this age means she is just not able to give consent."

The judge ruled that the unusual features of the case took it outside the normal sentencing guidelines, particularly given his guilty plea. Therefore the judge reduced the "too long" sentence to three years and four months.

The River Stort Houseboat dog theft is foiled

A FRENCH bulldog went missing from a houseboat following an attempted burglary in Harlow.

The incident happened when the owner, who was walking towards her houseboat on the River Stort, near Burnt Mill, Harlow, when she noticed an unknown man on board at 3.50pm on Friday, July 20.

When she reached the boat the offender had gone, but she noticed that the door had been broken and one of her dogs, a French bulldog, was missing. A Louis Vuitton bag was also taken.

The victim called Essex Police while her partner carried out a search and found two men with the dog. When he challenged them they threw the dog and ran off. The bulldog is now safely with its owners.

The suspect seen on the boat is thought to be a teenager between the ages of 17 to 19.

He is described as white, of a slim build, around 5ft 6ins tall and had short, mousey hair.

MP supports apprentice academy serving airport

Enterprise and skills training is where youngsters' dreams take off

By Huw Wales
huw.wales@reachplc.com

STANSTED Airport's Enterprise and Skills Academy was relaunched by the MP for Harlow during a meeting in July.

Robert Halfon, who is the former apprentice minister, visited the academy to speak with members of the National Citizens Service and apprentices from Harlow College.

Mr Halfon, who has close links to the college and helped pair it with the academy, visited it to see how apprentices were progressing.

Opportunity

He said: "We are going to be the skills capital of the East of England. Apprenticeships and skills present a ladder of opportunity for our young people."

The work that the airport is doing in providing these opportunities is great for education as a whole and the young people of Harlow and the surrounding area."

During his visit Mr Halfon met with Stansted Airport apprentices who were working in social media or engineering and spoke

Recognising the importance of sales and marketing

HAVING a strong sales and marketing team is absolutely vital if a business is to see success. Understanding how important this aspect of a business is, this year's Essex Business Excellence Awards will honour the region's best teams in this area with the Sales & Marketing Award.

One of 12 awards that will be handed out at the ceremony, this category is judged on the innovation and creativity within a sales and marketing team who have also demonstrated business excellence over the course of the year.

Sponsoring this award is the UK's fastest growing out-of-home media owner, 8 Outdoor. Supplying large, premium outdoor screens which allow companies to advertise, the company has access to a potential audience of more than 12 million people.

Peter Harvey is the company's business development manager, and he shed light on why they chose to sponsor this particular award.

He said: "We have chosen to sponsor the Sales & Marketing Award because it is a subject matter very close to our hearts. As a growing media owner, we help brands and businesses convert marketing to sales each week and so we wanted to put our extra support behind this particular group of nominees."

Essex is a county that is home to a wide-range of thriving businesses in a whole host of different sectors. With this in mind it is important that local businesses support one another, a sentiment that 8 Outdoor understand. Peter explained how they contribute to the regional business community.

He said: "Our Your Outdoor proposition allows us to work with Essex-based businesses to give the power of digital out-of-home advertising back to them. We believe that premium digital out-of-home is accessible to all brands and we want to make this a reality for as many businesses as we can."

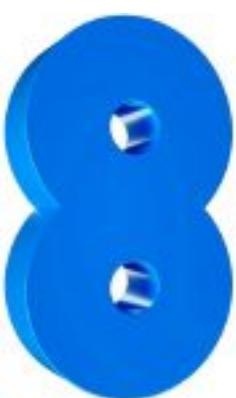

Always looking to enhance their offering, Peter went on to discuss the company's key focus for the coming year. He said: "We are continuing to invest in digital roadside billboards and industry leading technology as we build on our position as the UK's fastest growing out-of-home media owner. We want to speak to as many businesses as we can to make Your Outdoor a reality for them and continue to grow the digital out-of-home market."

Taking place on Tuesday, October 2, this year's awards will see finalists and category sponsors gather at Essex County Cricket Club for a night of celebration. The night will be hosted by comedian Mark Dolan and Olympic silver medallist Gail Emms MBE, with entertainment coming in the form of Britain's Got Talent musician Kev Orkian.

Championing all that's good about business in Essex

David Rooke of INVEST Essex explains why the Essex Business Excellence Awards were a perfect fit for the company

The first big announcement for this year's Essex Business Excellence Awards has now been confirmed with INVEST Essex coming on board as headline sponsors.

The UK business solution company are based at the heart of the region and has supported a whole host of local businesses making them the perfect choice as headline sponsor.

David Rooke is the location services director and explained why they decided to become headline sponsors.

He said: "As a promoter of inward investment and a business support agency within the county, to be involved with an event that champions all that is good about business in Essex seems a perfect fit to INVEST Essex.

"We have seen what success at these awards has done for the status of businesses in the past and have no doubt this year's candidates will be of a similarly high quality."

The Essex Business Excellence Awards celebrate all that is good about the local business community, and with 12 awards up for grabs, it means that companies of all sizes and types have the opportunity to be acknowledged.

David explained why it is important to celebrate the business success of others. He said: "No business is an island – having a solid network of fellow companies within the county is a positive, in terms of generating fresh ideas and approaches to tackling age-old problems for the business community.

"Clusters of the industry sectors we specialise in – ports and logistics, life sciences, financial services and high technology – are growing, with firms either expanding or investing in new premises, and all taking advantage of the county's proximity to the capital."

He continued: "Similarly the many co-working environments that exist within Essex – one of which, the Essex Technology and Innovation Centre (ETIC) in Ongar, is operated by INVEST Essex – are perfect examples of the way businesses are now collaborating with each other in order to bring about a better future for all."

Shining a spotlight on local business, the awards bring a range of benefits to the region as David explained. He said: "Essex continues to rank highly in UK business charts and standard of living surveys, encapsulated recently when Chelmsford was placed top among 12 locations in the East to make it into the Sunday Times' 'Best Places to Live in the UK' guide.

"What these Awards help to do is crystallise the diversity and capability of the business acumen at Essex's disposal, providing a showcase to those around the UK, and beyond, of what is possible from a base in the county."

Taking place on Tuesday, October 2, the event will take place at Essex County Cricket Club and offer the opportunity to raise funds for the Essex branch of The Lord's Taverners.

A game of stand-up bingo and a silent auction will take place with all proceeds going to the charity who raise money for disadvantaged and disabled children.

Dangerous state of our cycle tracks

MR DUNNE correctly places the responsibility for road maintenance with Essex but maintaining footpaths and cycle tracks is a Harlow Council duty.

Recently, I have begun using a mobility scooter and I find the conditions on many cycle tracks appalling if not dangerous. I seem to spend a lot of my time playing "dodgems" around the potholes.

My route to the town centre takes me through the Third Avenue underpass (behind Asda). Here there are two huge potholes almost six inches deep extending across nearly half the track. Having negotiated this, there is the rough ride up South Gate mainly due to paving being broken by HGVs delivering to Water Gardens shops.

On reaching Broad Walk, conditions are better but there are still many loose paving slabs and also raised manholes which could be a tripping hazard. On the other side of the town centre, the pavement by the First Avenue underpass is virtually impassable.

I'm sure that I shall find more delights as I explore the cycle tracks further. It's a pity that the money used on the unnecessary re-paving of the Market Square could not have been put to better use elsewhere.

Bike theft appeal from recovering cancer patient

HAS anybody been offered a 'bargain basement' bright

of the week

red bicycle?

The bargain in question would be a striking red Carrera Kraken mountain cycle. It has a 21 inch frame, 27 speed Shimano Altus Gearing, Dual Suntour Disc Brakes, Continental Tyres and a Boardman on-board computer. The frame number is AA70404033 and it has front suspension.

This cycle is very distinctive with black wheels and trim. It is only four months old and has done 350 miles. It was stolen from outside my flat in Hester House on the night of July 14. It was double locked and covered.

It took me a long time to 'scrimp and save' enough to purchase this machine; but I deemed it to be a healthy and worthwhile project towards improving my fitness as I am a recovering cancer patient.

To my current thinking the theft of my cycle goes beyond criminal. I believe it reflects a crass moral debasement among an element of contemporary society.

As a victim of previous cycle theft and burglary, I feel very strongly that crime against the person should carry a mandatory sentence of imprisonment. Further, if the crime is related to alcohol or drug dependency then a compulsory rehabilitation order should ensue: when an adequate diet of the proverbial 'porridge' has been digested.

I would welcome any information leading to the recovery of my 'missing' machine or the apprehension of the miscreants responsible.

Market Square refurbishment a bit premature

HARLOW Council are currently holding a consultation exercise on plans to shape the future redevelopment of the Town Centre.

Members of the public are being invited to a series of exhibitions being held across the town in the hope that some sort of consensus of opinion can be found.

The Harlow Alliance Party (HAP) are pleased to note that Harlow Council is trying to engage with residents and business owners and we hope that many of those people will take the opportunity to do so.

However, HAP notes that in the meantime Harlow Council's Regeneration Members have invested the huge sum of £276,007 to refurbish Market Square. HAP feel that this work is unlikely to revitalise the area or increase footfall and is a waste of public money. The council should surely have held back from any investment in this area until the findings of their consultations were discussed so that everyone's views including residents and businesses could be taken into account.

HAP hopes that Harlow Council listens to those businesses and members of the public who take the trouble to respond to the consultation now being undertaken. HAP believe any plan should look to enhance the shopping experience in the town centre and includes roofing all or part of Broadwalk, the creation of an indoor market, an entertainment/event space and drop off points for shoppers, all of which would increase footfall to the northern end of the town centre throughout the day.

Putting local economic growth on the agenda

THE BIG QUESTION:

What can our councils do to encourage a thriving local economy?

LABOUR

I THINK there are a number of things that local councils can do to help their local economy thrive but we must also bear in mind that we live in a time of austerity when many people are being forced to turn to food banks to feed their families and therefore don't necessarily have a huge amount of disposable capital. The new development in Bond Street may be exciting for some people but for a number it's just too expensive to contemplate shopping there.

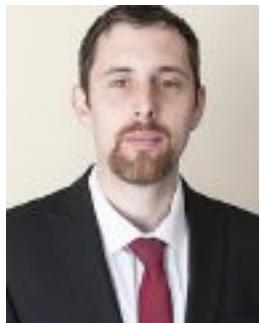

Overall however, local councils can encourage their local economy to grow by creating retail areas which are desirable for businesses to move to, and also keep rents down for small and medium sized businesses to flourish. I recently took a trip to South Essex, where there were as many boarded up shops as there were open ones. In these situations councils must work with local landlords to keep rents as low as possible. After all a closed shop is a missed opportunity, but worse than that can have a negative impact on the feeling of a place. Living in a community which is constantly seeing closures of community facilities and retail outlets must be extremely distressing.

Local councils can also help grow the economy by having meaningful dialogue with a host of partners, including but not exclusively business owners themselves.

Recognising that we have shared aims will be useful in any dialogue. We also need to make sure our retail outlets are accessible, who wants to queue for hours in a hot car just to go shopping? Councils can also ensure that their services are provided by local contractors meaning capital spending is invested locally.

Finally, let me reiterate the

importance of people having money in their pocket. Without capital at their disposal people cannot be spending and the whole economic model breaks down, keeping council rents and council rates down and ensuring they at least pay their employees a living wage helps get the cogs moving again.

HARLOW ALLIANCE

LOCAL authorities need to be beacons of good practice when trying to boost local economies and there are many ways they can do this.

Firstly, is to 'buy local'. Unfortunately many council's sign up to county wide purchasing hubs where lists are compiled of suppliers providing everything from paper clips to plant and equipment. They then have to buy from the suppliers on this list. This will often exclude small local suppliers and ones where it can sometimes be cheaper to buy from.

Local authorities should make every effort to purchase things from local manufacturers and suppliers.

Secondly, is the issue of parking charges and parking restrictions in High Streets or shopping centre.

Both traders and shoppers often find the policies of local authorities to be harmful to the prosperity of local shopping centres, giving advantage to out of town retail parks.

As more and more shops close on the High Street, council's must do far more to arrest this decline.

One way Harlow Council could make a start is by providing safe drop off points for those drivers who are bringing or collecting passengers who shop in Harlow Town Centre.

At the moment you do this whilst trying to dodge a traffic warden.

Thirdly is the whole issue of high business rates, which are driving many retailers to the wall.

Online shopping will of course never cease now, but the tax advantages and indeed tax avoidance enjoyed by on line retailers means that there is not a level playing field with those trying to sell through a high street shop.

Changes in the tax system

would enable shops to compete with on line companies and of course more money would then become available to improve public services.

GREEN PARTY

THE Local Government Association's report dated June 2017 entitled, "Growing places: building public services for the future" addresses this question well.

They identify four things that a thriving community needs, which they call on the Government to provide:

1) A safe environment – this includes policies such as continuing to support the development of a 21st century fire service equipped to play a leading role in keeping people safe with links to the health service in supporting healthy communities; limiting the establishment of new betting shops and keeping the stakes on fixed odds betting terminals low; and adequately resourcing local authorities work to address community tensions.

2) Ensuring correct transport provision – including fully funding the statutory concessionary fares scheme, and devolving to councils the existing Bus Service Operators' Grant in order to reverse the decline in bus journeys; reinvesting the equivalent of 2p per litre fuel duty to help councils bring our roads up to scratch; and developing a diesel scrappage scheme to get more polluting vehicles off the roads.

3) Fast and reliable digital connectivity – we need a renewed long-term vision for the high-speed digital connectivity of non-metropolitan areas across the UK.

4) A clean environment – the Green party believe very strongly that our economic prosperity depends on the health of our environment. It is the ultimate source of everything we make and use, from food and materials, to the air we breathe, and equality of access to nature and green spaces is vital to enhance leisure, health and wellbeing – as well as enhancing our ability to contribute.

I would add to these ideas the fact that all new housing has to be sustainable by including infrastructure such as renewable energy, natural environment and habitats for wildlife, places of employment, schools, medical centres, shops and leisure facilities and good public transport all close at hand. Then we would surely have a truly thriving local community and economy.

Hats off to pre-school nursery's graduation ceremony

KIDDI CARU'S Harlow day nursery celebrated the achievements of its pre-school class with a graduation ceremony.

Families were invited to the occasion, with the ceremony held in the nursery's garden in the sunshine.

There were 36 pre-school children graduating and each had their photograph taken as a memento and received a graduation certificate and goody bag.

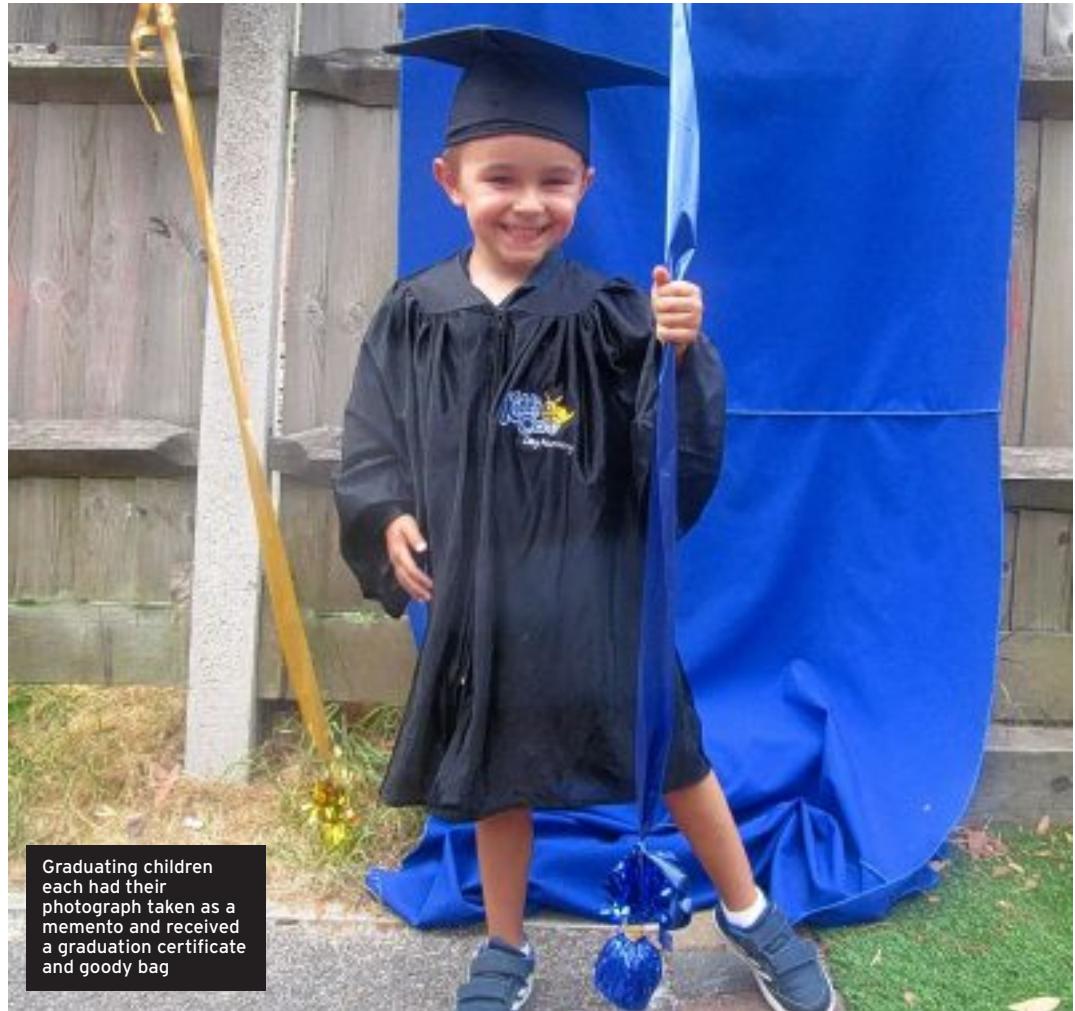

There was also a special appearance from Kiddi Caru's friendly kangaroo mascot, Roo.

Louise Farrow, nursery manager, said: "Although it's sad to see our pre-school children leave we feel it is important to remind them about how much they have achieved during their time with us before they go, so we hold a graduation ceremony every year.

"It's lovely for them to have a special graduation event attended by their families and gives them a confidence boost before they embark on their adventures at primary school."

First class honours and Dean's Prize accolade for high-flyer

FORMER Harlow College student Eleanor Topley has graduated from East London University with a first class honours degree in Psychology and Sociology.

Eleanor, a former BTEC Heath and Social Care student at the College also attended Burnt Mill School.

Aside from gaining First Class Honours she was also awarded The Dean's Prize. The award was given for her excellent dissertation on the topic of new mothers' experiences of breast feeding.

Eleanor's grandmother, Maureen Topley, was herself awarded a degree at the age of 81 earlier this year.

Eleanor is a product of the Harlow schooling system. She will now be preparing to train as a midwife at Anglia Ruskin University in order to put her knowledge and skills at the service of the community.

Academy students in winning form at Westminster debate on RE in schools

FOUR Year 10 students from Passmores Academy were lucky enough to be selected to take part in a prestigious Youth Debate at Westminster, organised by the National Association of Teachers of RE (NATRE) and the Religious Education Council (REC).

The event was designed to highlight the importance of religious education in schools, and was an opportunity to demonstrate how Passmores is improving the awareness and understanding young people have of all faiths and beliefs.

Passmores was up against a number of other strong schools whose students were experienced debaters. But, arguing in favour of religious education to be taught in schools, the motion was carried, and Passmores was on the winning side of the debate.

Students Harry Beavis, Niamh Carroll, Cassie Gordon, and Daniel Wiley

were also given a tour of Parliament before meeting with Harlow's MP, Robert Halfon who spent some time talking with the students and was so impressed, he offered them all the chance to take part in work experience at the Houses of Parliament later in the year.

Harry, who is also Head Boy of Passmores, said: "The debate went really well. I hadn't realised how formal it would be, but there was a strict procedure and it was all very professionally run. I'd like to do another debate like this on some other topic that I'm familiar with."

Students Cassie, Niamh, Daniel and Harry with Mr Halfon and Passmores teacher, Tammy Bassett

54 budding writers find success in poetry competition

A STAGGERING 54 Passmores Academy students are celebrating the amazing achievement of becoming published writers.

The students, who are all currently in Year 9, were selected by publishing company, Young Writers from hundreds of competition hopefuls across Essex and Hertfordshire.

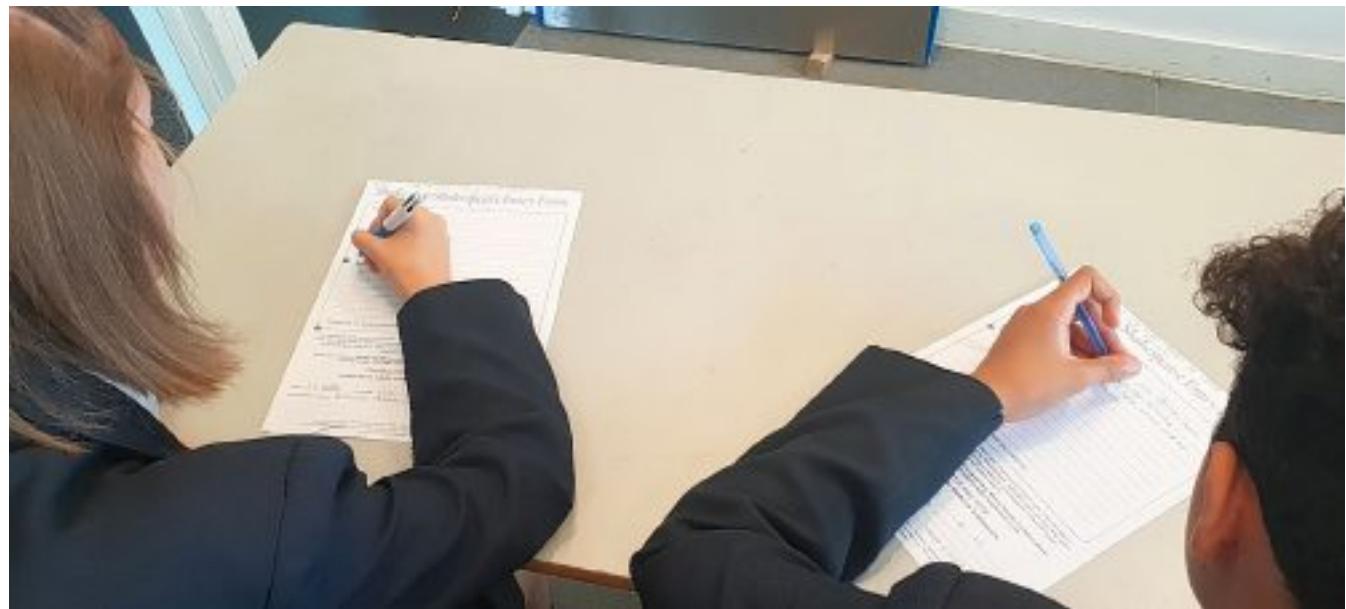

The poems were all written on the theme of Shakespeare and were required to include some aspect of the Bard's life or work.

Many of the students chose to focus on Macbeth, which they are studying as part of the GCSE English Literature syllabus.

Passmores already has a proven track-record for producing talented young writers.

Last year, over 40 of its students were successful in having their poems published in another of Young Writers' poetry anthologies, The Poetry Trials.

Passmores Head of English, Maria Gladen said: "It's an incredible achievement for our young people to manage to adapt another area of literary study into a modern form of poetry. They worked really hard on these poems, and managed to become published whilst writing about Macbeth or Shakespeare. It's no easy feat to have skilfully written something which other people want to read and this is a brilliant accomplishment for our young people."

Students working on their competition entries

The anthology, entitled Shake-up Shakespeare, will be available to order online from Young Writers this autumn. See www.youngwriters.co.uk

A look back at Victorian college with top facilities

■ This week's piece is written by Ryan Karolak and George Robins. George is currently volunteering at Harlow Museum for his Duke of Edinburgh Award.

I RECENTLY spent some time with a gentleman who was seeking information on a particular school in Harlow from the 1930s, writes Ryan Karolak. After some back and forward trawling through maps and documents, we were able to find out that he was talking about a college which used to have a great deal of prestige about it.

I spent an hour with him and by the time he departed I knew I wanted to write something to commemorate that event.

So, here is a story about the original Harlow College – before we had today's Harlow College.

Harlow College, also commonly referred to as St Mary's College, was built in 1862, positioned north of the Church of St John the Baptist, behind Market Street.

Opened on May 29, by Rev Charles Miller, the college was estimated to have cost £13,000, approximately £140 million in today's money.

When the institution first opened in 1862, only the eastern wing, and half of the northern annex had been constructed. And further additions, as implied in a contemporary report, stating: "When completed, the whole will form a quadrangle" and "At the end of the eastern end it is intended to erect a chapel", were never built. Instead a local church served as its chapel.

However, the building's progress was certainly not indicative of the school's, as it flourished in the years that followed.

Although initially only taking around 50 boys, the school quickly began to garner a reputation for excellence, and that number soon rose to an impressive 180 or so students.

The college boasted impressive facilities, with science labs, an art room, a gym, a playing field, dorms and a library just to name a few. As can be observed when reading a copy of the school's seven-page prospectus, the "library is well stocked with books – boys are encouraged to read in their spare time".

The school also had a "large television set" in the dining hall, and "its own cinema projector".

A typical day for the attending students would begin with a prayer before school, "in the church that adjoins the school and is virtually the School Chapel".

Boys were encouraged to donate time towards music, with one method being to attend the weekly concert at the headmaster's house.

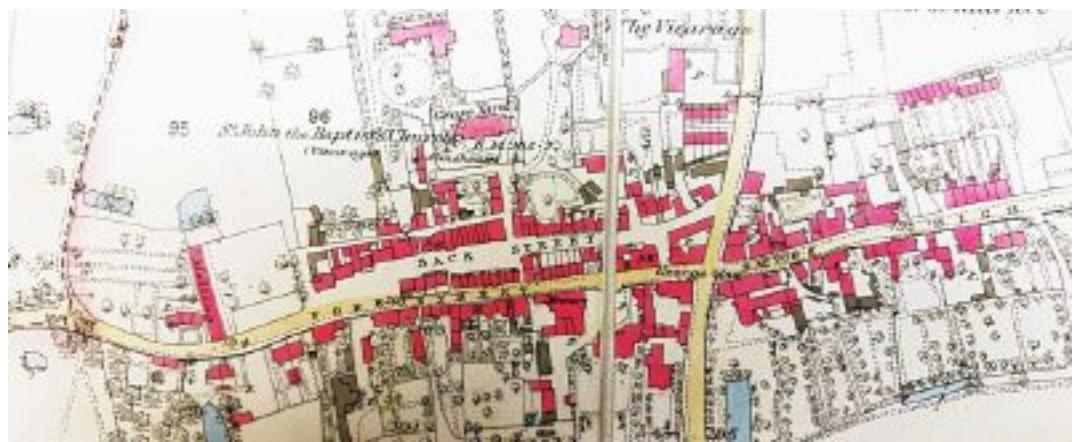

There was also an emphasis placed on sport, and in the summer term, boys played cricket, tennis and athletics, while in the winter football was the predominant interest, with running in the spring. Academically, the curriculum provided a five to six-year course in English, maths, French, science, geography, history and art.

One man who deserves particular appraisal for his role in elevating the school's reputation is the late Mr E P Horsey, who served as headmaster between 1904 and 1935. He presided over a time which can be considered the golden age of Harlow College, with the school progressing into one of the finest academic institutes in the area under his leadership, with students attending from various locations across the globe.

One former pupil looked back fondly upon the headmaster's impact, claiming: "Those of us privileged enough to come under his influence marvelled at the amount of knowledge acquired. "He had a wonderful way of imparting that knowledge and at the same time paying great attention to the formation of character."

In the wake of his death, Clifford Barker, the vice-president of the Old Harrovian Club, sent a letter to other members in which he stated that at a committee meeting, it had been decided that there would be a push for "erecting a suitable memorial to the late E P Horsey", and that it should "take the form of a lych gate".

Barker also stated "E PH. also had a distinguished public career; the least we can do is see that his name is perpetuated in a suitable way".

Unfortunately, with the emergence of Harlow New Town, things were destined to change for Harlow College.

New development plans had been put in place by the council, including a block of flats between the school and A11 Edinburgh Way roundabout, with Fore Street and Market Street located on the other side of the school, also subject to redevelopment.

In 1964, after being told the college was set for demolition the following year, as it was required for housing, there were plans to relocate to Hertfordshire, however, due to complications with moving and a fall in rolls, Harlow College was sadly forced to close in 1965.

As a means to end on a positive note, we were able to find what seemed to be his old school photograph from the 1935-6 academic year, so if you or anyone else who were involved in Harlow College throughout its life, come to Harlow Museum and we just may have something for you to reminisce about.

YOUR CHARITY NEWS

Could you brave Serpentine waters for sight loss charity?

SUPPORT 4 SIGHT is looking for three local swimmers to take part in this years Open Water Swimming Festival on Saturday, September 22 in Hyde Park.

The charity is offering two entrants the opportunity to swim one mile and one entrant to swim two miles in open water at the venue used at the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Organised by London Marathon Events in partnership with British Swimming, the festival will be held in and around The Serpentine in Hyde Park.

Support 4 Sight wants strong swimmers to represent them at the event and raise a minimum of £500 in sponsorship for the charity.

All swimmers in the mass participation mile must wear either a wetsuit or use a tow-float.

The event is a chance to take part in a once-in-a-lifetime event whilst raising funds for a worthy cause.

The fundraising team will offer continuous support to help swimmers achieve their target and more.

It is estimated that only one in five people with sight loss are registered, which is just over 7,000 people in Essex.

This means there are approximately 28,000 unregistered people in Essex living with sight loss.

Many of those would be unsupported to cope with the devastating effects, such as depression, social isolation or a huge decline in their independence.

The charity provides information, support and advice to people with sight loss, to support them to remain independent.

Support 4 Sight offers a resource centre in both Saffron Walden and Chelmsford, home visiting and a telephone service throughout West Essex. The charity wants to make sure local people are assisted to cope and are less isolated through sight loss.

Support 4 Sight also provides coffee mornings, support groups and social trips in Harlow, Chelmsford, Saffron Walden, Great Dunmow, Braintree and Witham.

The team offers support within Princess Alexandra Hospital, Broomfield Hospital and other community hospitals within the local area.

Incredible journey back to health of brave fundraiser who suffered bleed to his brain

AFTER studying for six years you suffer a catastrophic event which changes all your plans.

This happened to David Chennells more than 11 years ago. David suffered a massive bleed to his brain at just 26 years old. His family later discovered the cause was an AVM.

AVM stands for Arteriovenous Malformation.

The following months were difficult for David and for his family – extensive brain surgery... long stays in hospitals around the county... and then, months of rehabilitation, and finally, a new life, learning to speak, to walk, and to become independent again.

It was a long and gradual journey but David is a determined and positive person and has made incredible progress. Not only does he look after himself, he also gives to his local community by volunteering at the Harlow branch of CAB, and at the Partridge Road adult learning centre.

Walking has become important, there had been a time, in the months following his surgery, that David's family were unsure that he would ever walk again. Gradually gaining strength and, with the help of intensive physiotherapy, and a special device to stimulate his right leg, David took his first steps. And there's been no holding him back since.

Last year, on the tenth anniversary of his AVM, David completed a mile-long walk through Harlow town centre. Starting and finishing at the Water Gardens, the event was a joyful occasion for friends and family, who walked with David.

It was David's wish to carry out the walk as a personal challenge. But he also wanted to raise money for the Brain and Spine Foundation, a charity providing support and information to people affected in similar ways to David. Last Year David raised a £4,000 for the charity.

This year, David will do the walk again – Saturday August 11, is the big day this year.

Make a note of the date and come along to wave, cheer, support, walk, donate, and encourage. Your time, and your support will mean a great deal to David, who has overcome so much to be where he is now.

If you can't make it on the day, visit David's fundraising page, to show your support: <https://uk.virginmoneygiving.com/DavidChennells>

Fancy listening to great bands and making jewellery and headdresses?

ON Saturday, August 11, Herts and Essex Community Farm will be hosting its fifth annual Farm Fest at the Fold Croft site. The free festival is aimed at bringing the local community together, with fun for all ages.

Local musicians including Harlow Rock School, Ian Treherne, Electric Catnip and the Valaitis brothers will be performing on the stage, while over in the peaceful willow classroom guests can enjoy jewellery-making, rock-painting and headdress-making workshops.

There will be a barbecue with locally sourced meat from the Churchgate Sausage shop and vegetarian options available, while the farm kitchen will serve up an array of vegan food, including curry and chilli, using vegetables grown at the farm.

The farm shop will sell produce grown at the farm as well as jams, oils, teas, herbs and beauty products, all made with the same organic produce grown at the farm.

Organiser Elliot Wollen said: "We are looking forward to our fifth-ever Farm Fest. Last year was our busiest year ever and we hope to engage the local community again with a lovely day out to bring families and friends together in a beautiful environment.

"We have a lot to celebrate as our town is thriving and we feel we have our part to play by promoting environmental sustainability, organic food-growing and giving a chance to local musicians and people wanting to have a fun day out."

There will also be henna art, face-painting, exotic animals and old-fashioned games for everyone to enjoy, with great prizes for all. All proceeds will go towards furthering the work the community farm does, including working with schools, community groups and providing fresh produce to the local homeless charity Streets 2 Homes.

The event runs from noon to 6pm and guests are encouraged to arrive by foot or public transport as there is only limited parking available at the nearby St Thomas More Church in Hodings Road.

An after-party is being held from 7pm at Phoenix Live in the old TSB building, where local DJs Superfly and musicians Dan Thomas, Jedd Martin and Shambles will also be performing for a £3 entrance fee.

Herts and Essex Community Farm is a not-for-profit organisation aiming to promote educational, social, environmental and health benefits to the community. The project holds regular volunteer days that are open to all; volunteers are welcome to go home with a share of the produce, which is all organically grown.

Royal Marines cadet Henry makes his mark in field gun competition

A HARLOW Royal Marines Cadet joined others from across the country for this year's Royal Navy Junior Leaders Field Gun competition.

Cadet Lance Corporal Henry, 17, was among those representing the national youth charity Sea Cadets – which Royal Marines Cadets is part of – at the competition recently.

The team crews are made up of young people who have either recently joined the Armed Forces, just begun apprenticeships with the University Technical Colleges, are attending local community colleges or are part of the Military Cadet Forces.

With no previous field gun experience, here teams compete to build and transport a field gun and limber up, back and home, along a specialised marked track measuring 85 metres. They stop only to complete specific actions, all with the aim of running home penalty-free and with the fastest time.

Building on The Royal Navy's core values: courage, discipline, respect and integrity the teams train hard Monday through Thursday and compete in a three-heat competition starting on Thursday afternoon and running to the close of play on Friday.

The Junior Leaders Challenge is the only competition open specifically for new recruits and youths, offering them a chance to work as a team and challenge themselves in a unique setting.

The Sea Cadets, supported by 9,000 volunteers at 400 units, helps 14,000 young people across the country to see the world with confidence through water-based and land-based adventure. They were among 19 teams taking part in the event this year at HMS Collingwood in Fareham, Hampshire.

Lieutenant-Commander (SCC) Victoria Marson RNR, who was leading the team, said: "Our cadets and volunteers trained hard during the week leading up to the competition, it was great seeing them coming together as a team.

"This was a fantastic opportunity for our cadets and volunteers, to enhance the skills they will have already learnt at Sea Cadets, such as teamwork, commitment and self-discipline. They did amazingly well to pick up the Plate 3 final trophy."

Moorhen pub welcomes graduate from Craft Academy

ROBERT Halfon MP recently visited the Moorhen pub in Harlow to welcome Natasha, a soon-to-be Greene King apprentice, to her new role. Robert has long championed apprenticeships and was delighted to find out more about Greene King's Apprenticeship programme.

Greene King is the UK's largest pub chain, with locations across Essex and the UK. In 2016, the company launched its Get Into Hospitality programme, in partnership with The Prince's Trust, aiming to address the skills gap that prevents unemployed people from getting into work. A year later, Greene King launched The Craft Academy, an 18-month brewing venture led by apprentices as they earn while they learn about brewing, design and marketing.

Robert Halfon said: "One of the things I love most about Greene King is their commitment to and passion for apprenticeships. They are one of the biggest apprentice employers in the country and I was really pleased to meet Natasha in Harlow, soon to join the 2,500-plus strong workforce."

COME AND WORK FOR US

Ever thought about being a journalist?

CERI GOULD, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF, OF THE SOUTH EAST AND CAMBRIDGE REGION, WANTS OUR NEWSROOMS TO BETTER REPRESENT OUR READERS. WITH CHANGED WORKING DAYS, IMPROVED PAY AND A NEW CULTURE, SHE'S LOOKING TO FILL KEY ROLES WITH THOSE WHO PERHAPS NEVER THOUGHT THEY COULD HAVE A CAREER TELLING STORIES. HERE SHE EXPLAINS WHY SHE NEEDS YOU

'M a 46-year-old mother-of-two. What's that got to do with being a journalist? Everything. In my region, dubbed SEACAM, because it's quicker than saying South East and Cambridge, we are determined to open up our newsrooms to more 40-plus mothers of two, and 50-plus dads of four and school-leavers, those wanting a second (third) career, young parents, twenty-somethings from deprived backgrounds, people from ethnic minorities or other under-represented groups. You get the picture.

I believe that being more representative of the areas we cover will ensure we do a better job.

SEACAM, which boasts first-class websites such as CambridgeshireLive, KentLive, SurreyLive and EssexLive, is an exciting place to work, covering the newest, most diverse patches in the UK. We've got exciting plans to make more of our popular London sites, CroydonAdvertiser.co.uk and GetWestLondon and make the capital our own. We also produce the award-winning daily CambridgeNews and the flagship weekly newspapers, Essex Chronicle, Surrey Advertiser, Surrey Mirror and the Kent and Sussex Courier and a host of smaller weeklies.

It's my responsibility to recruit the best talent to SEACAM and in a bid to attract a stronger, more diverse workforce, I've made significant changes.

I realise that it's difficult squeezing life, children's sports days, boiler repairs, unwell relatives etc into full-time working hours. Our journalists work full-time hours in four long days and have three days off. We've also improved the salary of trainees and support them as they work towards our industry-leading Certificate of Journalism qualification. We are building our region as a centre of excellence for trainees and encourage quick promotion through the ranks to the content desk as we want our best talent to stay with us.

There is scope to move between the sites and also when you qualify, our sister nationals, The Mirror and The Express are very keen on recruiting from us. It's one of the many advantages of being part of a bigger company, ReachPlc.

The culture is one of lots of feedback and continued learning whether you're a newbie or someone who's been in journalism for 30-plus years. There are always new things to learn and new ways to tell stories.

Why journalism then? I began my reporting life on my local paper in the South Wales valleys. Nothing teaches you the value of accuracy or how what you write really matters better than that. There's nothing quite like walking into the local court to see a former school mate in the dock and knowing that your credibility is on the line if you don't ensure that the report of their appearance is published.

Being a journalist is a privilege. Being there for your finest and, sometimes your most harrowing times, is a responsibility which we take very seriously. We want to fight for you and stand up to authority and take it to task when we need to do so.

It is a challenging, wonderful job and no journalist is more trusted than those who work on the local brands. We write about the areas we love and we care about in the same way we would write about our family.

We don't get everything right and we always want to get better and one way we can do that is by strengthening our recruitment.

Take a look at the jobs we have on offer and I'm sure you'll be surprised at what's there. Among our ranks we have a former contractor and a former barrister. We have Oxbridge graduates and those from the school of life.

You can join as a community content curator as a school-leaver, or a return-to-work(er), or as someone who just wants to try something else and perhaps take our Diploma of Journalism course which starts in October. Success in this would mean you could then work with us to join our trainee reporter plan.

There is also the opportunity for those with some journalism training and qualifications to start as a trainee with us and work towards our industry-respected Certificate of Journalism. You may be an experienced journalist who wants to work in a positive culture where trying new things isn't frowned on and failing can be fine, as long as we learn something from it.

Above all else, ask yourself, do you love finding and telling stories?

Perhaps you could come and tell your stories ... to us and with us.

Who are we looking for in what roles?

We want the best storytellers for our roles across our brands. You will be excited about writing and recording stories that our readers love to share and engage with. You won't be afraid to try new things and you are always lovely to deal with

The role: London Politics News Director

Who do we want? We're looking for someone who lives and breathes local politics in the most exciting city in the world. Leading a team of local democracy reporters sited in newsy patches such as Westminster and Kensington and Chelsea, you'll be able to direct our coverage of council meetings, community health councils and wherever your news house will take you. Stories will be put on the BBC wire and our London sites. Opportunity to make a name for yourself: HIGH

The roles: Digital Content Editors (Surrey)

Who do we want? Can you think like a reader? Do you know just the right way to tell a story to make it compelling? Are you good with words? Do you know your SEO from your SOS? SurreyLive is one of our most successful sites and the potential to make waves as it cements its place as an essential read for everyone who lives in Surrey is enormous. Led by Deanne Blaylock, SurreyLive is at the forefront of creative journalism. Opportunity to learn a lot: HIGH

The roles: Multi-Media Reporters (SEACAM)

Who do we want? Are you curious? Do you want to know who, what, where, when and, most importantly, why? Is your life ruled by social media? Do you reach for your phone first thing in the morning? Do you know what the zeitgeist is, what people are sharing, caring about? Are you able to take a complicated story and tell it in ways your clever friend will not only understand but engage with and want to read more about? Opportunity to make waves: HIGH

The roles: Video experts (SEACAM)

Who do we want? Do you dream in pictures? Can you think of ways to tell stories using video-only? Do you know who's on YouTube? Can you tell a NowThis video at 100 paces? Can you understand why DoDo videos are so compelling? Opportunity to be compelling: HIGH

The roles: Community Content Curators (SEACAM)

Who do we want? Are you organised and love chatting to people? Can you form relationships with groups, politicians, sports clubs? Are you comfortable with computers and happy to learn new things? We also have a couple of places for curators to join our October 14-month training course for the Diploma of Journalism which we are running with Reuters. This would then give you access to join our trainee reporter programme leading to our Certificate of Journalism qualification. Opportunity to be brilliant: HIGH

The role: Trends Writer (SEACAM)

Who are we looking for? Someone who knows what the local audience is searching and how to write stories that can be easily found and easily shared. You will be brilliant with words, a whizz at SEO and can meticulously track data and respond to it quickly. Opportunity to be famously well-read: HIGH

The need for more diversity

A STARTLING statistic has been released by another news organisation – a 16 per cent BAME (black and minority ethnic) pay gap.

The reasons behind it may be nuanced but that doesn't make it right. I knew I wanted to work in news when I was at school and was determined to get there but I'm sure there were others from my background who wouldn't have seen journalism as an option.

I'm part of ReachPlc's Diversity Working Group and we are looking at how we can address this situation.

This is not about those boringly overused terms like 'political correctness', or positive discrimination, but merely about ensuring our newsrooms better reflect our audiences. These include simple things like taking into account different religious holidays and widening the pool of places we recruit from.

That way the stories we're telling to our audiences stay relevant and we also attract new readers – and writers – too.

Luke Jacobs, Brands Editor Kent Live

What kind of stories would you be investigating?

EXAMPLES of our journalism include uncovering the extraordinary story of star boxer Bilal Fawaz, who faced deportation, despite representing England six times and revealing the appalling video of a Cambridge student offering £20 to a homeless man before burning the note in front of him.

It also includes snapping exclusive pictures of Hollywood superstar Tom Cruise as he shot the latest Mission Impossible movie in Essex.

We did investigative storytelling into the horror at Grenfell and were there, one year on, to pay witness to those robbed of their loved ones after the Croydon Tram crash.

From video to social media meme, from live-blogging court to reporting inquests; our journalists are highly-skilled, multi-skilled and are creatively telling the stories that matter every day from every part of the South East and Cambridge region. You could join them.

Who we are and why we do it

WE'VE GIVEN SOME OF OUR JOURNALISTS 100 WORDS TO TELL YOU ABOUT THEMSELVES

Libby McBride, Acting Digital Editor for Cambridgeshire Live, on opportunities across SEACAM

I started as a trainee reporter on the Brentwood Gazette. I covered everything from tea parties to murders. I got my seniors and the Gazette merged with the Essex Chronicle and became web-first and we launched a new site - EssexLive. I worked as a reporter, breaking news specialist, then content editor at EssexLive, before being offered an exciting opportunity in a completely new newsroom - Cambridge News. During this secondment as digital editor, we've launched CambridgeshireLive. With an extended patch and creative ways of telling stories, we're seeing it go from strength to strength.

Darryl Webber, Design Content Editor, on how he came to produce our print titles

My long and winding path to where I am now started as a production assistant at the Essex Chronicle in the days before everything was done on computers.

After going off on a tangent to do a psychology degree, I trained as a journalist and became a feature writer and sub editor. A few years later I took over as editor of the leisure section and since then I've moved to the production side of the business and now oversee a team of sub editors who put together newspapers across the south east with titles covering Essex, Hertfordshire, Cambridge, Kent, Surrey and Sussex.

INTERESTED IN A ROLE? EMAIL EMMAJANE.SMITH@REACHPLC.COM

James Hind, Trainee Video reporter for KentLive, on why he went from pizza parlour to newsroom

I've done a variety of jobs from play centre assistant to mechanic and pizza chef to electrician. I studied Multimedia Journalism at Canterbury Christ Church University for three years and ran the student media site Unified, picking up some awards along the way. The work I did outside the classroom with Unified and work experience really solidified the idea that I wanted to go into journalism.

I chose to work at Kent Live because they are a modern multimedia brand with a team of like-minded journalists.

Katy Clifton, Newly-qualified senior reporter, on moving on

Without the 18 months I have spent working for Reach Plc, I wouldn't have gained the experience and confidence which has enabled me to get my senior qualifications and a job with the Evening Standard.

The fast-paced nature of reporting for west London means I am now confident covering breaking news, as well as coming up with creative ways of telling a story and engaging with our reader. While getting this experience, I have had the opportunity to report on things I am passionate about, such as spending a day live blogging in Northwick Park Hospital's A&E to get exclusive insight into how the hospital was coping with winter pressures.

Richard Duggan, Content Editor for EssexLive on why he chose journalism over law

After five years of gruelling and tedious study I decided to ditch my plans to become a criminal barrister. The reason for this was simple; I didn't love it.

But a spontaneous decision to write for a student newspaper led to a career which I am passionate about. Journalism is varied and exciting; one morning you're reporting from the scene of a shooting and by lunchtime you're live blogging about a fire wreaking havoc.

No two days are the same and it's a hell of a lot more exciting reporting on criminals and their exploits than it is defending them.

Isabel Dobinson, Trainee Reporter for SurreyLive and GetWestLondon on quality storytelling

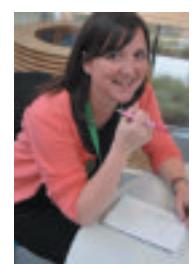

After studying history at university it didn't take long to realise I wanted to tell stories for a living. I've always been passionate about giving people a platform to share their experiences, injustices and concerns.

I've been a journalist for a year and it's safe to say I've written articles I'll never forget - from sharing the heartbreaking stories of domestic abuse survivors and the homeless to council budget cuts to services supporting disabled children and the fire service. I've worked with an incredible team at Surrey Live and now I'm ready to report the stories of west and south London having just transferred to that team.

Beth Duffell: On maternity leave

I have spent 12 years in local journalism and despite the many changes in how we access our news compared to when I started, I still absolutely love it.

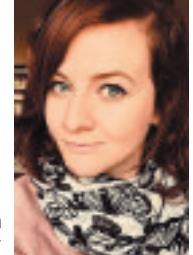

There's nothing better than watching a story develop from almost nothing into an article that really gets our readers talking.

Journalism is such a satisfying role. You give communities a voice and a chance to fight for what they believe in.

I am the mother of two sons, currently on maternity leave and have been able to work part time and spend quality time with my children being a mum.

Kat Clementine, Content Editor for GetWestLondon on being promoted

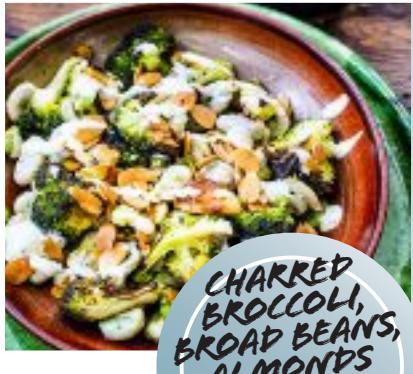

Once I'd completed my senior reporter exams, I wondered what to do next.

I'd spent months absorbing pages from McNaes and after the relief of completing my senior exams, I needed a new challenge to put my energy into.

At the same time, Reach Plc was advertising a Content Editor role which gave me just that opportunity. It's been a whirlwind of learning, mentoring and managing live blogs on huge breaking news stories - to name just a few tasks. No two days are the same and I'm excited for new ventures, including reaching even more audiences across the capital in the future.

CHARRED BROCCOLI, BROAD BEANS, ALMONDS & RANCH DRESSING

INGREDIENTS
 1 head of broccoli
 2-3tbsp olive oil
 1tsp sea salt
 4 turns of freshly ground black pepper
 2 garlic cloves, peeled but left whole
 500g broad beans
 75g flaked almonds
 ½ tsp butter
 Juice of ½ lemon

For the ranch dressing:
 150g mayonnaise
 ½ tsp red miso paste
 75ml soured cream
 2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
 50ml buttermilk
 ½ tsp salt
 1tbsp white wine vinegar
 A handful of chives, finely chopped
 A handful of parsley, finely chopped

METHOD

1. Preheat oven to 200°C Fan (220°C/Gas Mark 7).
 2. First make the dressing: Mix all the ingredients together – except the herbs – until combined. Stir the herbs through. Keep in the fridge until needed.
 3. Cut off the broccoli stem and cut it into small pieces; break off florets and slice in half to make smaller pieces. Mix one tablespoon olive oil and the salt, pepper and garlic cloves in a bowl. Add the broccoli pieces and stir to coat (stir in a little more olive oil if necessary). Place on a baking tray and cook in the oven for 10-15 minutes; turn them over and cook for another five to 10 minutes until they start to brown and crisp.

4. While the broccoli is cooking, place the broad beans in a bowl, cover with boiling water for one to two minutes to soften, then drain. Heat remaining olive oil in a frying pan, then fry the broad beans for about five minutes until crisp.
 5. In a dry pan, toast the flaked almonds on a low heat. Add the butter and allow to foam for 30 seconds, then spoon the foamed butter over the almond flakes. Remove from the heat and drain on kitchen paper.

6. Mix the broccoli and broad beans and squeeze lemon juice over; season with salt if needed. Place in a bowl and top with ranch dressing and almonds.

The 36-year-old is Rick Stein's middle son, and chef director of the Stein empire. Based in Cornwall, he's responsible for developing and implementing menus across the family's restaurants, and now he's preserved a slew of his favourite recipes – some borrowed, some adapted, some all his own – in Jack Stein's World On A Plate, his debut cookbook.

The idea he thrifited from his dad was to collect ideas, magpie-like, from his travels and then reproduce them with British produce. "We've travelled the world and found these amazing recipes and ingredients," says Jack, "but what Dad does when he comes back to England is, he does them with local, British ingredients."

It's a kind of fusion cooking Jack calls "very iconoclastic – it doesn't really have any rules this book, it's just whatever I think works". As a result, he's clear:

"If you're a purist, this book's not for you."

There's always a new country to visit and a new cuisine to try. For three months a year, setting off in December, the whole Stein family would travel the world together. The other nine months, Jack's parents were busy running their Cornwall restaurants. They "were virtual strangers to their three offspring," he writes in the book.

He slurped oysters in France for the first time aged four, witnessed the poverty of India at 11, and went on to work in kitchens in Sydney, Paris and Switzerland – but the cuisine

Jack Stein has inherited his father's love of travel and cuisine

I stole dad's idea... it's not plagiarism if you're family

Jack Stein, son of Rick, is a chef in his own right, and is releasing his first recipe book. ELLA WALKER met him to find out more

Inspiration: Rick Stein

that's most surprised and intrigued him is that of Spain. "I know it's not very far away, but when you're long-haul and you land in Singapore or Bangkok, and it's night-time and you're having a beer and all these crazy flavours, that's what you go for."

But," he continues, "I always thought Spanish food was just tapas, and a bit of paella."

That changed on a recce trip to San Sebastian with his dad for Rick's Spanish series.

They ate at cult wood fired restaurant Etxebarri (in the world's top 10 restaurants) and Restaurante Arzak, famed for its Basque food, all the while gorging at tapas and pintxos bars. "In one day, we did more incredible eating than I've ever known and we didn't even scratch the surface of San Sebastian, let alone Spain," says Jack reverently.

But Jack need only take a short stroll to find one of his favourite delicacies.

"I love crab, there's heaps of it down here," he says. "Just above the reef where I'm sat now, you can go down with a pole and stick it in a hole and get your own."

With seafood that fresh at his feet, it's a wonder he ever leaves the country at all.

I LOVE pinot noir and I love pinot gris. I crave them in the same way someone might crave ice cream, or chocolate. So, imagine my giddiness when I visited what can only be described as pinot paradise – the Pfalz and Baden regions in the south of Germany.

Each is fascinating in its own right and both are home to the most amazing wines from the pinot family.

Baden is Germany's southernmost wine region and the sunniest too. It benefits from warm Mediterranean air which channels up through valleys and is then trapped by the Black Forest and the Vosges mountains. Cooler air circulates in the evening, making for a perfect grape-growing environment.

Just further north and slightly to the west, the Pfalz is bordered by mountains, Rheinhessen, the Rhine and the French region of Alsace. Some of the German-owned vineyards straddle into France, a legacy of the Second World War.

RAISE A GLASS WITH JANE CLARE

It was here that winemaker Johannes Jülg, from Weingut Jülg, greeted us holding his young son, who was shyly clasping his father's neck.

A few minutes later

Erica served a delicious local dish of saumagen (sow's stomach stuffed with meat and vegetables).

We enjoyed it in the sunshine with a glinting glass of weissburgunder (pinot blanc); the flavours of the wine laden with notes of lemon and lime and flint.

Germany is the world's third largest producer of pinot noir, behind France and the USA. In Germany pinot noir is known as spätburgunder, but is rarely labelled as such here.

A couple of supermarket wines from the Pfalz region are Hans Baer Pinot Noir (RRP £7, Tesco, 12% abv) which is silky with raspberry and subtle savoury notes and Johann Wolf Pinot Noir (RRP £9.99, Waitrose, 12.5% abv, pictured below right) which has cherry flavours with a smoky depth. Villa Wolf, widely available, is also a good brand to look out for.

German pinot gris (grauburgunder) is mainly grown in the Pfalz and Baden and a good selection can be found at online merchant thewinebarn.co.uk.

Weingut Franz Keller nestles in the stunning, volcanic region of the Kaiserstuhl in Baden.

Franz Keller 2015 Grauburgunder Schlossberg Grand Cru (12.5% abv) is a special treat at £39.95 from Wine Barn but you'll love its minerality and apple and conference pear notes. The grapes grow on an old terraced vineyard, yards from where I sipped it.

In the courtyard of Weingut Heger, about 20km west of Freiburg, I avoided a wasp, tripped over a cobble, dropped a pen and knocked over a glass; but I was still full of praise for the wine, including Dr Heger Grauburgunder Sonett Dry (£14.85, Wine Barn, 13% abv) which is super-tasty with citrus, pears, apples and a peep of tropical fruit.

I loved my visit to pinot paradise. It was heaven.

INGREDIENTS
 2kg boiled brown crab
 4 tbsp groundnut oil/sunflower oil
 4 garlic cloves, finely chopped
 2.5cm fresh root ginger, finely chopped
 3 medium-hot red Dutch chillies, finely chopped
 4 tbsp tomato ketchup
 2 tbsp dark soy sauce
 1 tsp Marmite
 2 spring onions, cut into 5cm pieces and finely shredded lengthways
 A handful of chopped coriander

METHOD

1. Put the crab on its back on the chopping board, so that the claws and softer body section face upwards, twist off the main claws, leaving the legs attached. Now put your thumbs against the hard shell, close to the crab's tail, and push and prise the body section out and away from the shell. The legs should still be attached to the body. Remove the small stomach sac situated just behind the crab's mouth and pull away the feather-like gills ('dead man's fingers') which are attached along the edges of the centre part; discard.

 2. Using a teaspoon, scoop out the brown meat from inside the shell; reserve.
 3. Chop the body into quarters and then cut the main claws in half at the joint. Crack the shells of each piece with a hammer or the blunt edge of a large knife.
 4. Heat the oil, garlic, ginger and chilli in a wok for one minute.
 5. Next, turn up the heat and fry off the brown crab meat, add the ketchup, soy sauce, Marmite and 150ml of water.
 6. Add the remaining crab in its shell and stir-fry for two minutes. Remove from heat and finish with spring onions and chopped coriander.

CORNISH CHILLI CRAB

INGREDIENTS:
 4 cod fillets with skin on (180g each)
 2 tsp sea salt, plus more as needed
 30ml vegetable oil
 A knob of butter
 200g chard, cut diagonally
 A drizzle of olive oil
For the corn vinaigrette:
 2 ears of sweetcorn
 1tbsp sunflower oil
 1tsp sea salt
 1 banana shallot, minced
 1tsp English mustard
 A sprig of thyme
 50ml cider vinegar
 200ml extra-virgin olive oil
 A pinch of garam masala
 1tsp dark soy sauce

METHOD

1. Season the cod fillets with sea salt. Heat the vegetable oil in a non-stick frying pan to a medium heat and cook the fillets skin side down for two to three minutes, until the tops of the fillets begin to change to white in colour. Add a knob of butter to the pan, flip the fish, turn off the heat and leave the fillets to finish cooking in the residual heat. Check the temperature with a probe; it should read one teaspoon of salt, and toss to coat. Transfer to a baking tray, place under a hot grill, on the middle shelf, and grill for about 15 minutes, turning occasionally, until the kernels start to blacken.

COD WITH CHARD & CHARRED SWEETCORN

 3. Place the minced shallot in a bowl. Add the mustard, thyme, cider vinegar, extra-virgin olive oil, garam masala and soy sauce, and stir together. Then add the charred sweetcorn to the mixture and stir. Set the vinaigrette aside.
 4. Put the pan used to cook the fish back on the heat. Deglaze the pan with two tablespoons of water, then add the corn vinaigrette to warm it up. It should take one minute.
 5. Place the chard leaves in a saucepan along with water to a depth of 5cm. Cover pan with a lid and steam chard over a high heat for one minute. Once wilted, add salt and olive oil to taste. Remove from the heat.
 6. Divide the chard among four plates, dress it with the vinaigrette and place the cod fillets on top.

THE long-running animated TV series Teen Titans Go!, a tongue-in-cheek spin-off from the DC Comics universe, makes its big screen debut with a grin-inducing flourish thanks to co-directors Peter Rida Michail and Aaron Horvath. Teen Titans Go! To The Movies pokes gentle fun at the glut of superhero films, which clog up multiplexes and earnestly expand the mythologies of well-known characters torn from the pages of comic books.

A nimble script, co-written by the TV series' creators Michael Jelenic and Horvath, takes aim at predictable targets: the avoidable tragedies in superheroes' pasts, Stan Lee's obligatory cameos, that instantly forgettable Green Lantern film starring Ryan Reynolds.

Most of the punchlines elicit knowing giggles as a perfunctory plot sermonises the importance of teamwork and self-sacrifice to younger audiences.

Fleeting verbal gags, including a spoof of the Marvel Comics flip book title sequence, are complemented by knowing, self-referential dialogue that gleefully draws attention to the film's own shortcomings including a big reveal about the identity of the chief villain.

Michail and Horvath's film is gently effervescent escapism with modest ambitions and a jaunty soundtrack.

The charmingly deluded Teen Titans, comprising Robin (voiced by Scott Menville), Starfire (Hynden Walch), Cyborg (Khary Payton), Beast Boy (voiced by Greg Cipes) and Raven (Tara Strong), proudly patrol the streets of Jump City. The wannabes are too busy performing a song about their origins to vanquish a marauding inflatable menace called Balloon Man (Greg Davies), forcing Superman (Nicolas Cage), Wonder Woman (Halsey) and The Green Lantern (voiced by Lil' Yachty) to intervene.

"You're goofsters!" despairs the Man of Steel as the members of the Justice League depart to attend a movie premiere for their pal, Batman (Jimmy Kimmel).

The Teen Titans sneak into the screening and Robin is devastated to learn that Alfred the butler, the Batmobile and even Batman's utility belt will be getting standalone films directed by Jade Wilson (Kristen Bell).

"What are we missing?" rages Robin. "An arch nemesis!" surmises Raven and the Teen Titans decide that a masked thief called Slade (Will Arnett), who bears an uncanny resemblance to Deadpool, will fill that void and persuade director Jade to turn her cameras on Robin.

Teen Titans Go! To The Movies is lightly dusted with in-jokes for fans of the Marvel and DC Comics franchises but the tomfoolery doesn't alienate or exclude mainstream audiences.

Casting Cage as Superman is an inspired move – the Oscar-winning actor was scheduled to don the flowing red and blue cape in Superman Lives in the late 1990s for director Tim Burton until the project was shelved. Twenty years later, his proud Kryptonian crusader out-muscles the faltering Batman Vs Superman: Dawn Of Justice.

WEEK

Scott Lang (Paul Rudd) transforms into Giant-Man in Ant-Man And The Wasp

ANT-MAN AND THE WASP

(12A) ★★★★★

Earlier this year, larger-than-life characters from the Marvel Comics galaxy united to combat the threat of mighty Thanos in the superhero showdown, Avengers: Infinity War.

However, one miniature crimefighter – wisecracking cat burglar Scott Lang (Paul Rudd) – was notable by his absence from the pyrotechnic-laden combat.

Peyton Reed's crowd-pleasing sequel neatly explains Lang's no-show against Thanos with a high-octane blast of rip-roaring entertainment, which dizzies and delights in equal measure.

Adopting a more intimate style of storytelling, Ant-Man And The Wasp choreographs outrageous set-pieces without sacrificing the broad humour or tender emotion that made the original 2015 film a sizeable hit.

Notably, this is Marvel's first action-packed feature with a female superhero proudly name-checked in the title and Evangeline Lilly's airborne assassin dominates bruising fight sequences when she isn't catalysing molten on-screen chemistry with Rudd's reluctant saviour.

Ant-Man's ability to shrink to the size of an insect at the touch of his powersuit's button, or expand to the hulking form of a skyscraper-toppling giant, is exploited to greater comedic effect in the second film with the aid of seamless digital effects.

A turbo-charged car chase along the undulating streets of San Francisco is particularly memorable when the technology malfunctions and Scott is unable to revert to his usual form and avoid drawing the attention of hordes of camera-wielding tourists.

Following the cataclysmic events of Captain America: Civil War, Scott is sentenced to two years under house arrest followed by three years of probation.

"Any violation means 20 years in prison. Minimum," warns his parole officer Jimmy Woo (Randall Park).

Dr Hank Pym (Michael Douglas), inventor of the Ant-Man technology, and his daughter Hope (Lilly) are in hiding, conducting experiments that will allow them to rescue Hope's mother Janet (Michelle Pfeiffer) from the quantum realm.

(Hannah John-Kamen) who suffers from molecular disequilibrium, black marketeer Sonny Burch (Walton Goggins) and lecturer Bill Foster (Laurence Fishburne) become entangled in Hank and Hope's plans.

When disaster strikes, Scott defies the terms of his house arrest to don the Ant-Man suit and retrieve a stolen power source.

His workmates at X-Con Security – Luis (Michael Pena), Dave (Tip "T.I." Harris) and Kurt (David Dastmalchian) – pledge their support but could inadvertently hinder Scott at a critical juncture.

Ant-Man And The Wasp draws heavily on Rudd's boyish charm and impeccable comic timing to deliver big laughs.

Plot is flimsy and the quest to rescue Janet from the quantum realm is unnecessarily protracted but the sequel doesn't feel bloated at a buzz shy of two hours.

Special effects don't overwhelm the verbal gymnastics and do stay seated for the end credits.

Predictably, there are two additional sequences – a narrative cliffhanger and an amusing throwaway gag – secreted in the lengthy final crawl.

PERFECT START

THROW SOME SHADE

There are many ways to try keeping cool during hot, dry and sunny weather. Some are obvious and others, less so.

For those looking to downsize - or for people looking for that perfect first home - this house represents an ideal opportunity. PAGES 2&3

HOT HOUSE

This two-bedroom terraced house in Harlow is close to the town centre and would make a good starter home

THE PERFECT PLACE IF YOU'RE STARTING OUT

This Harlow house has just arrived on the market and could be a perfect starter home for those looking to get on the property ladder. Located in Primrose Field, Harlow, this two-bedroom terraced property is just outside the town centre and is also close to rail and road links to London and other parts of the country.

Marketed by Guardian Residential Lettings and Sales, the house is on the market for £250,000.

The ground floor of the property is home to an entrance hallway with doors leading off to the kitchen, reception room, bathroom and two good-sized double bedrooms.

The kitchen has plenty of space to accommodate a table, while the living room also has lots to offer, including double doors leading out to the rear garden.

The bedrooms are sizeable enough and neutrally decorated, allowing the new owner to put their own stamp on it immediately and the bathroom comes complete with a full white suite.

The house has a large loft room upstairs which can be set up and used however the new homeowner sees fit.

Outside the garden is turfed throughout and offers plenty of space should they want to make use of the summer weather.

Primrose Field is in close proximity to local amenities, as well as great primary schools, adding to the appeal of this house.

It is a short drive away from Harlow town centre and is also just 1.8 miles away from Harlow Town train station for rail links into London Liverpool Street station.

For those looking to downsize – or for people looking for that perfect first home – this house represents an ideal opportunity.

WATER WASTE

Not fixing a dripping tap could leave you out of pocket and add to the current drought

As much of the country still swelters in the heat – and shops run out of fans – we've all been encouraged to save water. For some, it's tougher – hose pipes are or will soon be banned.

But however hard we try to save water – showers instead of baths or a special brick in the cistern or waiting for full washing machine loads – many waste litres a day often without knowing it.

And for those households where water is metered – around a half – that's more than pouring water down the drain. It's also costly – even if it's only a leaky tap. While rates vary from area to area, just one dripping tap can increase bills 6%.

Direct Line Insurance says one tap drip a second equals 25 litres wasted a day. That's nearly three standard watering cans or a full size dishwasher requirement.

Leaving the drip can cause further problems in your home from damp if the water does not go straight down the plughole.

The insurer calculates that all our dripping taps add up to 460 million litres a year – enough to fill 184 Olympic-size swimming pools.

Around a third of homes have had to deal with a leak in the past 12 months. And one in four of those – about five million people – have had a problem beyond their DIY skills.

Typically, we ignore drips for 25 days before acting, but 13% leave it for over a month or longer.

The main culprits are kitchen sinks followed by bathroom taps and shower heads. Other leaks include outdoor watering systems. Those not immediately visible – often joints in pipework or leaky radiators are both wasteful and can cause structural problems including rotting floorboards and rising damp.

Some home and landlord insurance companies, including Direct Line, offer emergency plumber call-outs for serious leaks such as burst pipes.

Policies should also help if your home is ruined by pipes breaking unexpectedly.

Ignore a dripping tap or pipe and you are just storing up more trouble

SAVE WATER, SAVE MONEY

■ Water metering is generally not compulsory. You can stay on the old scheme based on your home's rateable value. Metering pays if your household is small – probably not for bigger families. Legally, water companies can insist on meters if you have an automatic garden sprinkler or a Jacuzzi style bath, above.

■ Converting to meters can show up leaks – perhaps between the mains and your home. If you change to a meter, you can revert to rateable value within two years. If you move into a property with a meter, you cannot change to rateable value.

■ Dripping taps can damage some sink or basin surfaces. If you attempt a DIY repair, always turn off water mains first, and then ensure any water in the pipes runs out. There are online videos showing how to repair most taps.

■ Old taps may be difficult to sort. Or need tools you don't have. In doubt, call a plumber – it's cheaper than dealing with a water disaster.

■ You must ask landlord permission to move to a water meter if your tenancy has less than six months. Your landlord may also cover dripping taps and other plumbing problems.

■ WHICH? Trusted Traders is a scheme that can find a tried and tested plumber near your home.

YOUR HOME

They might not be the hottest new gadget on the market, but a decent shower is one of the most important aspects of our daily routines.

Showers are now such a commonplace feature in our homes that it's difficult to imagine life without them - but far more than being just a means of getting clean, a good shower helps us revive and restore, setting us up for the day.

Over the years, there have been many revolutionary shower models and designs. From the introduction of electric showers in the Sixties, to the Eighties witnessing the creation of different shower head models and body jets, the humble shower has come a long way.

Thinking of upgrading? Here, an expert shares five things you need to know before upgrading your shower...

MAKE SURE ANY NEW MODEL IS COMPATIBLE WITH YOUR HOME'S PLUMBING SYSTEM

It's surprising how many homeowners don't know the type of plumbing system installed in their home. If you're planning on having a new shower installed, this is the first thing you need to find out, to make the process smoother and ensure the model you choose is compatible with your home's plumbing.

"If you have a cold-water tank in your loft, and a hot-water cylinder in your airing cupboard, then you most likely have a gravity system," says Roland Boal, lead industrial designer at Mira Showers (mirashowers.co.uk).

"If you have a boiler the size of a small kitchen cupboard, and you don't have separate hot and cold-water tanks, then this is most likely a high-pressure system," Roland adds.

DESIGN OPTIONS ARE ENDLESS - SO DO SOME HOMEWORK FIRST

You might be surprised by how much choice is out there - and because there is so much to choose from, it's a good idea to do a little research and get an idea of what you're looking for before upgrading.

Mar Esteve Cortes, of design company Neolith (Neolith.com), says of current bathroom design trends:

Get some shower savvy

LAUREN DAVIDSON asks the experts for useful tips and tricks

"In the past, bathroom design has been overlooked as other rooms are prioritised, but we're seeing interesting trends on the horizon at the moment, including monochromatic colours and seamless, single slabs being used in shower cubicles.

"Walk-in showers are a popular way of optimising space in what is typically a compact room," Mar adds. "Using the same material inside and outside the shower evokes a sense of continuity, rather than segmenting the area into smaller sections, creating the illusion of more space."

LITTLE FEATURES AND DESIGN ADDITIONS MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE

Whether it's a multi-setting shower head or a wall-mounted storage tray, modern designs allow you to add a variety of useful features to a shower.

Margaret Talbot, marketing manager of Vitra UK (vitra.co.uk), says: "A shower seat, is a comfortable addition. Don't forget a wall-mounted storage basket for shampoo. If you're planning an over-bath shower though, forget about shower curtains - they don't contain the water effectively."

LOOK FOR ENERGY-SAVING OPTIONS

According to the Environment Agency, the average UK household uses 140 litres of water each day, with showers being responsible for around 30% of this.

But as well as improving the style and functionality of your bathroom, looking to upgrade your shower could be an opportunity to make your home a little more planet-friendly too, and help reduce energy bills.

Andy Grigor, head of design and innovation at Methven (methven.

There's a perfect shower for everyone - just take a little time to see what's on offer com), says: "If you're looking to save on your energy bills, opting for a low-flow shower handset is one of the simplest ways to do this."

If nothing wakes you up in the morning more than a power shower (which, naturally, tend to use more water), consider trying an 'air shower head' instead - these are designed to mix air and water in order to create the feel of a power shower while still being more energy and water-efficient.

BE SMART WITH YOUR TECH CHOICES

Whether it's controlling your shower settings via the click of a button or through an app, or having screens and speakers installed, bathroom design can be pretty high-tech.

And this doesn't stop at design features inside the shower, either - there are smart options for guarding against leaks and water damage too.

Matt Poll, CEO and founder of the UK's first smart home insurance provider, Neos (neos.co.uk), says: "Smart home technology is a great option to look into when upgrading your shower, allowing you to help prevent leaks escalating. Some insurers now offer smart home technology as part of your package, so it's worth looking around to see what you can get."

"If you're having complex pipework laid, for example a wet room, it's a good idea to look into some wireless, wi-fi-enabled leak sensors. They can be installed in minutes and mean the smallest of leaks can be detected, both while the work is being carried out and down the line, when the pipework might be hidden away behind tiles."

GARDENING

HEAD FOR THE SHADE ON SIZZLING SUMMER DAYS

There are many ways to try keeping cool during hot, dry and sunny weather. Some are obvious and others, less so.

Garden umbrellas are probably the first line of defence. Put up several before the sun rises, and not only will the shade provide a mini-refuge, but the air flow around the umbrella will create a little breeze too. You don't need a fancy stand, some garden parasols, such as the Eazy Shade from Cave Innovations, come with multi-function clips and clamps so that they can attach to chairs and tables.

The shade of choice for the moment is the sail. Sail shades come in all sorts of sizes, colours and shapes and the art of creating an attractive design is fun!

These woven fabric shades can be mounted on trees, poles or other high anchor points and offer sun protection for a day, a week or a month, depending on your fixings. Style and practicality all rolled into one.

Plus there's the option of a roll-out awning which can be fixed to the side of a house, offering a more permanent shade which is there when you need it.

These come in many different colours and patterns and somehow they always seem to add a 'beach hut' type of atmosphere to a garden.

Then there's water, of course. The sound and sight of water is not only visually cooling, but as water evaporates, the air temperature is cooled, and air movement is created. Sitting by a pool or water feature with an operational fountain offers a relaxing and immersive experience which calms the mind and lowers temperatures too.

Pergolas, arches and arbours are a great way to achieve shade and long-term structure. Wooden or metal framework makes ideal climbing areas for plants such as Clematis, roses, passion flower, jasmine and even Bougainvillea during hot summer sunshine.

The shade provided by these structures provides a long-term benefit to your garden and it's fun to find suitable plants for the various areas adjacent to the form. Place a table and chairs under or next to the pergola for a cool and shady seat which benefits from the scent of beautiful summer flowers.

COOL PLANTS!

Then there are plants, of course. There's probably nothing better than the shade cast by a semi-mature or mature tree. But of course, you have to wait for your tree to grow before you benefit. If you are lucky enough to have garden trees, make the most of the cool area beneath. As the branches sway in a gentle breeze they create a pleasant air-flow and a sound that is reminiscent of the sea. Cool!

There are other plants that generate a cooling swish and help to move the air around. Ornamental grasses are some of the very best as they shimmer and sway in even the slightest breeze, making a sound that transports you to the beach. Some grasses are used as living screens, such as Miscanthus sinensis 'Gracillimus' for example. It grows up to two metres high and not only brings sound and movement to a space but creates a welcome patch of shade too. The slightly smaller Miscanthus 'Morning Light' is just as effective and highly versatile. Then there are the pampas grass types which form tall plumes up to three metres high, on a mounded base – and bamboo which has a multitude of different uses. If you have ever heard bamboo stems moving in a breeze, you will have to have some! Not all bamboo needs strike fear into the hearts of men. Some is well-behaved and clump-forming rather than rampant. It makes an excellent screen and has terrific form, particularly when the foliage is removed from the mid and lower parts of the stems. Light the stems at night for the ultimate cool effect!

Every garden has a little shade and you could consider making a fernery in suitable spots. Garden ferns are generally shade-lovers and they like damp soil. By planting en-masse, you create a rich habitat which shades the soil and the fresh green fronds help to cool the air.

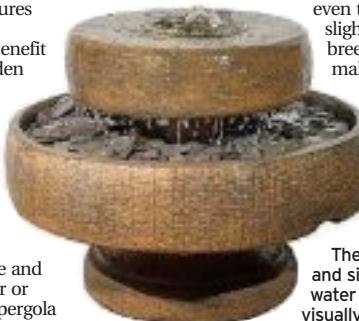

Other shade-loving plants make you feel chilled just to look at them, including Brunnera macrophylla in all its different guises. Top favourites are B. 'Alexanders Great'; B. 'Silver Spear' and B. 'Mr Morse', all of which have the most amazing, silvery, shimmering leaves with green veining.

Heuchera are also groundcover plants that prefer a little shade. This is a great bonus for gardeners as their colourful foliage conserves moisture in the soil beneath. Heuchera come in many different colours including reds, lime greens, purples and coppery orange – they can be used to create a cooling sea of foliage which is both eye-catching and practical too.

Enjoy the hot season, stay cool and be creative with your shade!

A FAMILY FAVOURITE

When a car maker has been making a medium-sized family estate car since the early Fifties that has continuously sold well it's a fair bet that they know what they are doing.

Volvo may have been ribbed by some in the distant past that their estates were rather dull looking and rather too box shape but they still sold well to middle-class family motorists and served well thousands of loyal buyers.

Even with the current fashion in seeing a glut of new so-called Sports Utility Vehicles coming on to the market it's good to see that the Swedes at Volvo have stuck to their core values in believing estates can still appeal to families.

The launch this week of an all-new V60 estate shows too that Volvo can make a modern day cool styled, versatile, attractive medium-sized estate with real common-sense practicality - an ideal alternative to the gaggle of SUVs now around.

This front-wheel-drive V60 is a really handsome looking beast with a sleek design, typical Volvo Thor's Hammer headlights at the front with nicely contoured side body and a neat, tidy shaped rear complete with twin exhaust pipes and to widen its appeal it comes with a choice of 14 exterior colours and five upholstery shades.

There are two trim levels at launch - Momentum and Inscription - with a sportier R-Design coming shortly as the top trim/specification - while a full 4WD Cross-Country model will be here before the end of the year. Prices start at £31,810 for the 2.0-litre 150bhp D3 Momentum, expected to account for 20 per cent of UK sales with its nice, crisp feeling six-speed manual gearbox, CO2 of 117g/km and average fuel consumption of about 64mpg, through to over £40,000 for the Inscription Pro D4 FWD Automatic. The V60, which is packed to gunnels with all the latest technology on board along with, as one would expect of the Swedes, loads of in-built safety features, is certainly a strong contender for its three main rivals - the BMW 3-Series Touring, the Audi A4 Avant and the Mercedes-Benz C-Class estate. Estates of course are all about load carrying capacity and here this new V60 scores top marks, beating those three rivals hands down, with a 529 litres of luggage space with all rear seats in use, extending to 1,441 litres with them folded down flat.

The other plus points here are that it's dead easy to fold those rear seats, easy to load with no lip to overcome and a nice, wide opening with the tailgate raised while for rear seat passengers they have the biggest amount of knee and head room of any estate car in this sector.

The cabin oozes quality too with excellent lumbar support seats, front and rear, lots of soft leather too while for the driver plenty of high tech assistance on board, including a 9.3-inch touch screen in the middle of the dashboard with all the controls, instruments sensibly laid out and easy to use. It's certainly the most impressive cabin layout and quality finish ever to come out of a Volvo factory in my book.

Although long term Volvo has already announced it will phase out diesel engines in favour of hybrid and electric cars for the time being it's staying with diesel, particularly aiming at company car drivers with their annual high mileage.

So with 65 per cent of V60 buyers expected to be fleet customers over 35 per cent private, retail buyers at launch there are two turbodiesels (D3 with 150bhp and D4 with 190bhp) plus one petrol called a T5 with a two-litre turbo petrol pushing out 250bhp.

Other power trains will follow such as a T6 twin engine plug-in petrol-electric hybrid and as with all V60 models there's a raft of optional extras to have on board, including Volvo's impressive Pilot Assist semi-autonomous driving system.

Crucially in this medium estate car sector are residual values and judging by price experts CAP HPI they will hold extremely well - buyers say will recoup around 44 per cent of their purchase price after three years and around 30,000 miles which is extremely good.

With a choice of either a six-speed manual gearbox or an eight-speed automatic gearbox (as briefly driven here) this V60 delivers a smooth and refined performance and with such a quiet, yet responsive 190bhp diesel engine it's a real pleasure to drive. Keeping the auto in both comfort and D driving model it offered good road grip with little body roll when pushed hard around the more twisty country lanes and up and down the hills of north Yorkshire on its media launch. After briefly testing the manual gearbox with the same engine on the same kind of roads my choice would be the automatic - it makes for slick up and down gear change when needed and with the bigger 190bhp engine it's ideal for both urban driving and really comes into its own cruising on motorway.

Volvo has come up trumps again with this second generation V60.

FIRST DRIVE: Mazda6 by Mike Torpey

M6'S POWER PLAY

The inexorable rise of the SUV has not come without consequence for the UK's new car scene. It's something that Japanese manufacturer Mazda appreciates better than most.

Between 2006 and 2010 the stylish, spacious Mazda6 family car was the company's top selling model.

That's not the case in 2018 and Mazda has taken steps to ensure that the admirable 'six' isn't written off as a relic of the past.

In fact it's anything but a has-been – upgraded, given more punch, some added style and a flashy new overcoat to make it look more stylish than ever.

Car makers can't seem to agree over which power source in which to direct their resources at the moment – some favour hybrid, others EV, some petrol.

One thing's certain with Mazda, the brand is fully committed to the internal combustion engine.

And while sales of diesel engines are down by fully quarter so far this year, Mazda remains convinced that their oil burners are, and will continue, to be clean and lean.

So the latest Mazda6 lineup includes a pair of reworked 2.2-litre diesels with output boosted from 175 to 184ps along with the current 2.0-litre petrol engines.

Making its debut for Mazda in the UK though is the company's SKYACTIV-G 2.5-litre petrol engine featuring cylinder deactivation, whereby two of the four cylinders shut down at moderate speeds to improve fuel economy.

Priced from £23,195 to £33,585 the combined Saloon and Tourer range features 25 models across four trim levels: SE-L Nav+, SE-L TUX Nav+, Sport Nav+ and GT Sport Nav+.

Design changes see the newcomer adopt a new-look front end focused around a new grille, which has the mesh positioned deeper within the surround to create a more muscular face. It works really well too, giving the car a more distinguished appeal.

The car's LED headlamps have been revised and the lower bumper features a sleeker profile, while both body styles get a cleaner rear bumper style with more body coloured areas.

That's in addition to new alloy wheel designs and the arrival of Soul Red Crystal Metallic paint, which thanks to Mazda's three-layer Takuminuri painting technology increases brightness by around 20 per cent and depth by 50 per cent. It looks stunning but will set you back an extra £800 for the privilege.

Inside there's a larger eight-inch centre display screen plus a colour windscreens projected Active Driving Display and both the dash and door trim designs have been restyled.

With an increase in safety equipment across the range, all models now feature advanced i-Activsense technology including Blind Spot Monitoring with rear cross traffic alert, Mazda Radar Cruise Control, Lane Keep Assist and Advanced Smart City Break Support.

Mazda's driving exercise from the Cotswolds into South Wales and back via the Severn Bridge took in some spectacular scenery and roads to really challenge both car and driver.

The new 2.5-litre petrol engine is paired exclusively with a six-speed automatic gearbox and works well in both Saloon and Tourer, though our average return in the former was just over 25 miles per gallon compared to the official combined figure of 42.2mpg.

In range-topping GT Sport Nav+ trim and in the new Soul Red Crystal paint, it was comfortable, beautifully appointed, strong – 0-62 in 8.1 seconds – and a refined car to drive.

The outward journey was in a top spec Tourer model with the 2.0-litre 165ps petrol unit, an engine that performed smoothly on faster roads and the motorway.

Parts of the test drive featured quite steep uphill sections and on these the Six felt a vir breathless at times, raising concern as to how it would cope in similar conditions with five people and a boot full.

It led me to feel that in this model at least, diesel may well be the answer.

VALUE FOR MONEY

The Dacia Sandero still has the honour of being the cheapest car available in the UK. Go back a few decades and cheap and cheerful cars were very much derided – remember those old Skoda jokes.

Interestingly Dacia doesn't seem to be the butt of many jokes and the reason is that an awful lot of people are buying them.

Not only that but there seem to be a lot of very satisfied customers.

Put simply if you're on a limited budget, see a car as very much an essential means of getting about rather than a style accessory then a Dacia makes perfect sense.

The Sandero range starts at just £5,995 for an Access Sce 75 model.

This model sits quite a bit up the Sandero range and is significantly more expensive but in the greater scheme of things it's still as cheap as chips.

For a start it's a Stepway model, a variant on the standard Sandero with the aim of giving it more of a crossover look and feel.

Its ride height has been raised by 40mm and it has roof bars and a few other styling enhancements aimed at delivering a slightly more rugged look.

The entire Dacia range was refreshed in 2017 and enhancements included an upgraded trim on the inside, which is noticeably smarter and more modern.

I particularly liked the soft-touch steering wheel, which feels much better than ones I remember in older Dacias.

Also the repositioning of the electric window switches on the door makes much more sense.

The interior of something like the Sandero is still spartan it has to be said, but it's far from being cheap and nasty and everything works rather well too.

As well as that eminently affordable price another big selling point for Dacias is that you're essentially getting Renault technology.

Some of it may be past rather than present but the fact is it's proven and performs well.

This model came well equipped, having electric front windows, automatic door-locking, remote central locking, lights in the boot and glovebox and an audio system with radio/CD player, Bluetooth, plus an AUX socket and a USB port.

The cabin is nicely laid out and roomy, with rear seat passengers particularly well catered for in terms of both head and leg room. Boot space is generous too.

The Stepway comes in two trim levels (Ambiance and Laureate) with a choice of either a 90bhp petrol engine or a 90bhp diesel unit.

This car had the three-cylinder turbo-petrol engine (a lower powered version of it is available on some Sandero models) and it proved a smooth and capable performer.

The driving experience was enhanced by an impressive, slick-shifting five-speed gearbox.

Given the Sandero's price tag one might imagine you are going to sacrifice a lot in terms of driving dynamics – but this isn't the case.

Okay, it's unlikely to win any awards for its handling but overall it ain't half bad.

It is characterised by half decent driving dynamics and I had no real complaints about the driving experience.

There's some pitch and roll when you push it hard, in part due to a rugged suspension designed to cope with rougher road surfaces than the UK.

As a consequence the ride quality is actually rather good and definitely one of the Stepway's strong points.

Golden glory for in-form Lambert

THERE was golden glory for 12-year-old Owen Lambert, Harlow Judo Club's sole representative who made the long but successful trip to Weston-super-Mare to compete at the West of England Age Band Open.

The Pre-Cadet section was open to any grade player as long as they were born within 2004/05.

Owen won all of his fights in his weight category, to see him into the finals and clinch the gold medal.

He showed great ground work (ne-waza) and judo techniques to outclass his opponents.

This is another area conquered for Owen that can be added to the Southern and London areas that he already holds.

Owen's next challenge is to take the Eastern Area title in a couple of weeks' time, and he hopes to achieve the remaining area crowns in the UK before competing in the British Championships at the end of year.

Messenger delivers thrilling victory against South Woodford

By Andrew Franczak

andrew.franczak@hertsessexnews.co.uk

IT was certainly a case of squeaky bottom time for Harlow as they secured a last ball victory over South Woodford to close the gap at the bottom of the Shepherd Neame Essex League division Two.

With the scores level, Jake Messenger held his nerve to hit a four to win the match after also contributing earlier in the field with two catches, a run out and a wicket.

The result means just nine points separate the bottom five teams in the league.

South Woodford won the toss and elected to bat. Nicky Baxter had opener Henry Blackwell out for a duck with the first ball.

The good opening bowling continued with Callum Sykes removing Bradley Copper, caught by Messenger, to leave the hosts reeling on 13-2.

Baxter then took two more wickets to make it 43-4.

After this, South Woodford settled and the score moved on to 99 before Messenger first took a wicket, and then had a direct hit at the stumps for a run out, to take the score to 99-6.

With Harlow going well they then let it slip as Jamie Carroll (87) revived the South Woodford innings in a partnership of 96.

The hosts then lost three quick wickets to make it 196-9, with Luke Monger taking two and another for Sykes.

A late flurry ensured South Woodford reached 230 before the last wicket fell to Joe Riddell.

Harlow got off to a steady start in reply, moving to 54 before Mitch Howarde went for 37.

Straight after Luke Monger was out for 17 to leave score at 55-2, which soon became 70-3, as Soulat departed.

Captain Rehman Ahmed (49) was joined at the crease by Ryan Jessey (35) and between them they put on 80 to push the score on to 154-5.

Zabi Hakimi (10) was unable to make an impression, but with plenty of overs to spare and a run rate of five an over required, Nicky Baxter (42) edged Harlow closer to victory at 212-7.

A mini collapse ensued as first Callum Sykes (8) went, and then Ross Vasani for a duck, to leave the score on 227-9 with four runs required.

However, Messenger kept his nerve and scored the final run for victory off the last ball.

Harlow's second team (245-9; Thomas Smith-Hughes 47, Simon Baulcomb 40, Atif Mustehsan 32, Max Baulcomb 30, George Messenger 27, Danny Stone 26) lost to Chingford II (251-7; Waheed Azam 2-34, Lewis Aldred 2-15).

The third team (293-7; Dipendra Basnet 65, Rob Coldwell 46, Jake Hikmatashah 60, Ilhan Mustafa 42) beat Hainault & Clayhall III (233; Tyler Dobson 2-51, Reece Galvin 2-45, Abdullah Farooq 2-20, Jake Hikmatashah 2-16).

Another loss for the Hawks

HARLOW Town have been struggling for form in their pre-season friendly games, with a 3-2 reverse against Cheshunt on Saturday their latest defeat.

The Hawks went ahead before the hosts hit three in reply through Sam Kifwasima, Jason Hallett and Nathan Koranteng.

Adu Gyamfi and Jason Raad netted for the Hawks.

Harlow took on a West Ham XI last night (Wednesday), and will be hoping to complete their pre-season on a winning note as they host Bostik South Central side Hertford Town this Saturday.
